'Orderly transition' promised

Carter begins task of replacing Lance

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is trying to replace a man he says is irreplaceable.

Stunned by the resignation of longtime friend Bert Lance as his budget director, Carter began the search today for a successor.

"There will be an orderly transition," the President told a news conference Wednesday when he announced Lance's resignation. "I will decide beginning after today on who a successor might be."

Among names that quickly surfaced were:

—James T. McIntyre Jr., director of Georgia's budget office in 1972 while Carter was governor and now deputy director of the Office of Management and Budget, which Lance had headed.

—Robert Strauss, a former chairman of the Democratic National Committee and now the U.S. ambassador for trade negotiations.

—Alice Rivlin, director of the Congressional Budget Office.

—Hale Champion, former California finance director and now an official at the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Carter said the task of finding a new budget director won't be easy.

"I don't think there is any way that I could find anyone to replace Bert Lance that would be, in my judgment, as competent, as strong, as decent and as close to me as a friend and adviser as he has been," the President said. "Obviously, the government will continue," Carter declared, "and I hope to do a good job as President, and I am sure a successor will be adequate."

"But there has been a special relationship between me and Bert Lance that transcended official responsibilities or duties or even governmental service of the last six or seven years."

"So he has occupied a special place in my governmental career, in my political career, and in my personal life. I don't think there is any way anyone could replace him now."

Carter hinted that he might have an additional problem because of the controversy that finally forced Lance to resign.

Asked if the Lance affair had damaged his own credibility with the American people, the President replied: "I can't say. I'd guess to some extent."

In a letter to "My Dear Mr. President," Lance quit "because of the amount of controversy and the continuing nature of it" surrounding his personal financial affairs and his business dealings as the head of two Georgia banks.

Lance's business and banking practices have been under investigation for several weeks by the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee, Justice Department, Securities and Exchange Commission, Federal Election Commission and Internal Revenue Service.

They are looking into large overdrafts at Lance's First National Bank of Calhoun, Ga., by Lance, members of his family and the committee that ran his 1974 campaign for governor of Georgia; two multimillion-dollar personal loans at banks where his National Bank of Georgia had special accounts; his use of the same collateral for two loans at separate banks and allegations that he used bank-owned aircraft for his personal and political travel.

In three days of testimony last week before the Senate committee, Lance said he might have made some mistakes but declared that his conscience was clear of any wrongdoing.

He said the same to Carter.

"It was, and is, important that my name and reputation be cleared, for me, my wife, my children, my grandchildren and those who have trust and faith in me. And I believe that this has been done," Lance wrote in his letter of resignation.

"As I said at the Senate hearings, my conscience is clear."

As Carter read Lance's letter to reporters on national radio and television, he stumbled on the word "resignation."

An aide said the President was as close to tears as he has been since his wet-eyed victory statement the morning after his election last November.

"Bert Lance is my friend," Carter said.

"I know him personally as well as if he was my own brother."

Question after question at the news conference was about Lance.

Carter cast his eyes down from time to time, tightened his lips and responded to the questions, one by one.

After 34 minutes, he ended the news conference himself, without waiting for the senior news service correspondent to say, "Thank you, Mr. President."

The Democratic majority leader of the Senate, Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia, a key weathervane in the Lance case, said: "The nation cannot afford to have as director of the Office of Management and Budget a man whose personal problems are so great that they detract from the performance of his duties."

From the Republican side, Senate Minority Leader Howard H. Baker of Tennessee, said: "I don't think President Carter will ever fully recover. ... The damage has been done."

After a last meeting with Carter, Lance returned to his home in Washington's fashionable Georgetown district. Moments after Carter's news conference ended, Lance's wife, LaBelle, stepped out of the house and said: "I didn't feel my husband had to resign. I still feel he could take a job anywhere. He's honest and good and I'm proud of him."

Coffee Break . . .

AN ESTIMATED 4,000 pre-school children in Ohio are suffering from amblyopia, an eye disease which can cause blindness.

Three local organizations will launch an attack Saturday in an attempt to locate any Fayette County area youngsters who may be suffering from the "lazy eye" disorder.

An amblyopia screening clinic will be held from 9 to 11 a.m. and 1 to 3 p.m. in the Junior Achievement building at 476 N. Fayette St.

The free clinic, sponsored by the Washington C.H. Lioness Club in cooperation with the Fayette County Health Department and the Ohio Society for the Prevention of Blindness, is designed for children ages 3-6.

Amblyopia, if left untreated until a child reaches age seven, usually results in permanent eye damage, and often, blindness.

Children found to be suffering from the disorder will be referred to medical eye doctors for proper treatment.

RESIDENTS of the Highland community in Highland County shouldn't be alarmed if they see an aircraft shining a searchlight over their homes tonight.

Officials at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base near Dayton said today that the C-130 Hercules aircraft will be shining its searchlight toward the ground over the Highland community, approximately 20 miles southeast of Wilmington.

The aircraft, belonging to the 4950th Test Wing at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base, will be performing routine tests and will be flying at 6,000 feet over sparsely populated areas, officials said.

Residents invited to county buildings

Good Neighbor Day set in Miami Trace schools

The Miami Trace School District is formulating plans for this year's observance of National Good Neighbor Day, which falls on the fourth Sunday in September.

Superintendent Guy M. Foster termed last year's observance a success and the Fayette County Board of Education has given its approval to a similar observance this year.

"The board recognizes the importance of the schools displaying a good neighbor approach and wants to highlight the occasion by inviting citizens of the district to visit the schools," Foster said in a written announcement.

The county schools can not observe this Sunday's date, so the observance will be delayed several days.

The dates of the observance will vary from school building to school building, but "Good Neighbor" activities will be held during a three-day period at each school beginning on Wednesday of next week.

The school district held its first observance of National Good Neighbor Day last year when area senior citizens were invited to attend classes, eat meals, and tour school buildings.

This year's activities will take a similar approach to helping county residents become more familiar with their schools.

While everyone in the county school district is invited to visit during the observance, Foster is urging parents of students to visit the schools on other days such as open house, Parent-Teacher Organization meetings, and parent-teacher conferences.

"On Good Neighbor Day those persons who aren't normally involved with school activities are being encouraged to attend," Foster said.

He added that special invitations would be extended to grandparents, senior citizens, or "next door neighbors" who don't have children in school.

Each of the county's 11 schools will develop its own approach to inviting visitors, arranging for a program and making lunch reservations.

The final details will be announced by Foster on Monday.

Foster said the students will benefit from the experience of inviting "neighbors" to school even through extending the invitation and preparing for the visit.

"After last year's experience, it was noted that several senior citizens contributed to classroom discussions and actually served as resource persons," he said. "The students and faculty enjoyed the contributions of their guests during the occasion that was initiated in 1976."

At New Miami, Middletown plants

Armco to idle 600 workers

Ohio's once-mighty steel industry received another setback today when Armco Steel Corp. announced it will terminate 600 jobs at its New Miami and Middletown works by Oct. 1.

The cutback will affect 8 per cent of Armco's hourly work force in New Miami and Middletown, the company said.

C.G. Kramer, Middletown works manager, termed the layoffs "the first step in returning the plant to where it should be in importance to Armco."

While the cutbacks are technically termed layoffs, the company said the reductions would be permanent in an effort to restore the company's profitability in Middletown and New Miami.

The southwestern Ohio company cited steel imports as a major barrier to the plants' making a profit. But it said high costs of energy, raw materials and labor also were factors.

Armco's announcement came as Mahoning Valley communities in northeastern Ohio, still stunned by the announcement that most of their revenues will be cut off by Youngstown Sheet & Tube cutbacks, were searching for help.

Frank Lesaganich, United Steelworkers union District 26 director, announced five buses will leave the steelworkers' hall in Struthers early Friday morning on a trip to the White House to present President Carter with petitions.

The petitions ask for federal intervention to aid the steel industry with such measures as import quotas and reduced environmental protection restrictions.

Gov. James A. Rhodes already has sent Carter a request for help.

The petitions are signed by steelworkers, local officials and other persons affected by Sheet & Tube's plans to transfer its local operations to a plant near Chicago and lay off 5,000 Youngstown area workers.

Rhodes met with local officials from the affected areas Wednesday and promised them state assistance.

"This is not of your doing," he told them. "You are the victims of a system that is beyond your control, so the Ohio legislature is not going to let you suffer alone."

He promised state-funds to make up school revenues that would be lost with the shutdown.

In Campbell, where city officials said 91 per cent of its personal tax revenue comes from Sheet & Tube, school officials estimated the shutdown will mean the loss of most of the $1.8 million in taxes it now gets from the company.

Supt. Robert Hedrick said he fears voters, facing the big layoff and worried about their own finances, will vote down a 2.8-mill operating levy

"which we need now more than ever."

Federal officials also promised aid in the form of jobless benefits and retraining programs Wednesday, adding they would press Sheet & Tube for any possible way to reverse the decision.

In Washington, a Labor Department spokesman said the action represented the largest nonmilitary employment reduction the department had ever encountered.

Senate now has money bill

Deer Creek's projects get boost from solons

The proposed marina, lodge and golf course at Deer Creek State Park were pushed a step closer to actual construction Tuesday when the Ohio House of Representatives passed the capital improvements appropriations bill.

The bill includes about $65 million designated for the Ohio Department of Natural Resources (ODNR). Approximately $13 million of that has been authorized in revenue bonds for the construction of the proposed Deer Creek facilities, according to Mel Rebholz, deputy director for resource management under the ODNR.

"Funding is in (the bill), but it still must go to the (state) Senate," Rebholz said, adding that the bill slipped by the house easily on an 82-12 vote.

He noted that the actual money needed for construction will not reach that $13 million ceiling. As the bonds are retired, the deputy director indicated, the final cost would be lower.

Construction of the marina, which carries an estimated $1 million price tag, has already begun. Once completed it will include 135 docks with a capacity for 270 boats. The facility will also contain a special service building for boaters and a concessions area. It is expected to be completed late this year.

ODNR development plans for the park call for construction of an 18-hole golf course and pro shop. The course will be located on the east side of the lake, adjacent to the park.

However, Rebholz said the only construction so far has been a 2.8 mile access road to the site of a proposed

AP poll discloses

Public opposes Panama treaty

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Panama Canal treaty, backed strongly by President Carter but a center of controversy in the Senate, is opposed overwhelmingly by the American people, according to a nationwide Associated Press public opinion poll.

The survey found 50 per cent of adults questioned oppose the treaty, under which the United States would relinquish control of the canal to Panama by the year 2000. Twenty-nine per cent favored the pact, and 21 per cent were undecided.

While opposition cut across regional, party, educational, age and income lines, the treaty was least popular among persons over 60. Only 20 per cent of the persons in that age group backed the treaty, while 53 per cent were opposed and 27 per cent had no opinion.

One of the strongest shows of support came from persons in the 18-to-29 age group, where 35 per cent approved compared with 47 per cent against and 17 per cent undecided.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee opens hearings next week on the canal treaty, which President Carter and Panamanian leader Omar Torrijos signed in Washington on Sept. 7 amid a ceremonial show of enthusiasm by hemisphere leaders.

There actually are two treaties, but they are considered indivisible. One calls for the United States to relinquish sovereignty over the Canal Zone to Panama by the year 2000. The other would always permit the United States to militarily ensure the neutrality of the canal.

The AP poll, with findings similar to those of other recent surveys, showed Carter's efforts have failed to win support for the treaty within his own party and among residents of his native South.

But with the ratification vote not scheduled until next year, Carter has several months to gain sympathy for the agreement. He has said he thinks public sentiment is turning in favor of the canal treaty, and is banking on a national "education" effort to help win the two-thirds vote needed for Senate approval.

The poll, based on telephone in-

Deaths, Funerals

Mrs. Effie Pursley

JEFFERSONVILLE — Mrs. Effie Pursley, 96, of 11243 Marchant-Luttrell Road, died at 12 a.m. Thursday in Fayette County Memorial Hospital where she had been a patient six hours.

Born in Fayette County, Mrs. Pursley had spent her entire life in the Milledgeville community until six months ago when she moved to the Quiet Acres Nursing Home. Her husband, John Pursley, died in 1951.

She is survived by a son, John Pursley, 11449 Marchant-Luttrell Road; a daughter, Mrs. Cecil (Helen) Blair, of Chillicothe; four grandchildren, and four great-grandchildren.

Services will be held at 1:30 p.m. Saturday in the Morrow-Huffman Funeral Home, Jeffersonville, with the Rev. Gerald Wheat, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in Washington C.H., officiating. Burial will be in the Milledgeville-Plymouth Cemetery.

Friends may call at the funeral home from 2 to 4 and 7 until 9 p.m. Friday.

MRS. MABEL ACKLEY — Services for Mrs. Mabel Ackley, 78, formerly of 1117 E. Paint St., were held at 1:30 p.m. Wednesday in the Gerstner-Kinzer Funeral Home with the Rev. Robert Kline officiating.

Mrs. Ackley, the widow of Benjamin F. Ackley, died Sunday.

Pallbearers for the burial in the Washington Cemetery were Roy Langley, Robert Holcomb, Danny Southward, Jerry, Joe and Shad Ackley, and Jim McCallister.

AMY DAYE DAUGHERTY — Graveside services were conducted by the Rev. Earl Russell in the Good Hope Cemetery at 10 a.m. Wednesday for Amy Daye Daugherty, daughter of John M. (Mike) and Peggy J. Breakfield Daugherty, of 6370 Scioto Farms Road-SE.

The infant was still born at 5:44 p.m. Monday in Fayette County Memorial Hospital.

Arrangements were made under the direction of the Gerstner-Kinzer Funeral Home.

Columbus bomb probes are continuing

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Columbus police and the fire department bomb squad are continuing an investigation into three false bomb threats in the capital Wednesday, one of which emptied the 42-story State Office Tower of some 3,750 workers.

They are looking for links between the tower threat and two in the Empire Building two blocks away and a phone report which tipped police to the existence of about 20 sticks of dynamite without fuses at the base of the Christopher Columbus statue at City Hall.

A male caller phoned Richard Jackson's office of Administrative Services in the State Office Tower shortly before 9 a.m. and said there were 26 sticks of dynamite in the capital city's tallest building.

Some 25 minutes later the building was empty except for about 20 security officers and Columbus police who searched the building for about 90 minutes.

"I think the evacuation time was about what we expected," said Jackson, who made the decision to empty the tower.

He said a repeat of the evacuation would cause considerable problems in government functions.

"Certainly anything of this nature causes disruption which causes a problem. But it's a problem that must be coped with and we'll cope with it."

"It's very difficult to know what lurks in these sick minds," Jackson said of the caller.

"Somebody's just getting their kicks," a police spokesman said. He also reported that police officially have not tied the three incidents together.

Governor-elect turns on lights

TIJUANA, Mexico (AP) — The governor-elect of Baja California, Roberto de la Madrid, has a lot of fans in this border town of 700,000 residents — he got the city's lights turned back on after a night in the dark.

Madrid called federal officials in Mexico City and won a two-week reprieve in payment of $90,000 due for federal electricity. The power had been turned off Tuesday.

When the lights in city hall returned Wednesday, Mayor Fernando Marquez Arce was using kerosene lights. His employees were sent home at dusk the night before. They usually stay until 9:30 p.m.

A spokesman for the mayor said Tijuana doesn't have enough money to pay the bill, which is up 500 per cent since January because of the peso devaluation.

Thank You . . . . .

Many thanks to our friends and relatives for their acts of kindness while I was a patient in Mt. Carmel W. Hospital. Their cards, visits, transportation and prayers will long be remembered. Thanks again.

SALT treaty to expire

U.S., Soviets resume arms talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and the Soviet Union are resuming arms talks, apparently prepared to concede that the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty now in effect will expire in 11 days without a new agreement to replace it.

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, who held two negotiating sessions this past spring, headed the delegations for today's talks at the State Department.

The initial SALT agreement, signed five years ago, imposed limits on land-based and submarine-launched intercontinental ballistic missiles of the two superpowers.

The current talks have been deadlocked for 18 months, and under one plan the two sides would adhere to the current agreement beyond its Oct. 3 expiration date.

The talks scheduled for today originally were set for Sept. 7-9 in Vienna but were postponed, ostensibly to allow Vance to attend the Panama Canal treaty signing and to permit Washington and Moscow more time for preparations.

Administration officials have insisted all along that the principal goal is to reach an arms agreement equitable to both sides without taking into account arbitrary deadlines.

Thus, although no eleventh hour breakthrough is anticipated, officials said the two sides will exchange ideas on ways to break the deadlock.

The key hangups have involved Soviet attempts to limit the U.S. cruise missile, similar to an unmanned jet plane with a nuclear warhead, and American efforts to restrict long-range use of the Soviet Backfire Bomber.

For the administration, the most worrisome aspect about an informal agreement to extend the SALT I agreement seems to be that it is bound to run into demands from Congress for a say in the process.

The administration hopes to sidestep a congressional role in order to avoid a potentially divisive public debate on U.S. arms policy while negotiations are going on for future arms limitation.

Officials also say they are hopeful of keeping congressional involvement to a minimum to maintain maximum flexibility in negotiations with the Soviets.

But the arms control law requires Congress to approve "any action" that places limits on U.S. armaments. The issue before the administration is a question of whether an extension of already agreed limits represents "an action" subject to congressional review.

Kent State alumni oppose gym

KENT, Ohio (AP) — Kent State University alumni have formed a group to fight construction of a gymnasium annex near the site of the 1970 shootings by Ohio National Guard troops.

May 4th Coalition member William Arthrell, now representing the new group, Alumni Against the Gym, said at a news conference Wednesday that more than 100 alumni have joined the group.

They have pledged to cut off financial contributions to the university if the annex is built near where four students were slain and nine were wounded by guardsmen.

Arthrell complained about few reporters attending the news conference. "I guess they don't show up unless someone gets a pie in the face or police are dragging away protesters," he said.

The Alumni Against the Gym is the latest splinter of the May 4th Coalition, a loose organization that has been protesting the construction of the $6 million gymnasium annex since May.

Another splinter group, the Blanket Hill Forum, formed last week to fight the construction plans.

Coalition spokesman Freddie Lee of Cleveland Heights, said a group called the Case Western Reserve Support Committee for the May 4th Coalition—Blanket Hill Forum, has set up a tent on the Case Western campus in Cleveland as a symbolic protest against the construction now getting under way at Kent State.

Lee said the tent is occupied 24 hours a day and is used as a center to disseminate information, collect petition signatures asking the U.S. Department of Interior to designate Blanket Hill an historic site, and to encourage other student groups at other universities to establish similar symbolic protests.

Lee also said a nonprofit corporation called the Kent Historical Society has been incorporated under Ohio law and will seek to secure preservation of the site.

The coalition and its various splinter groups are planning a rally which they say will draw several thousand supporters to Kent State Saturday. Their estimates have been inflated in the past.

Rhodes accused by director of abusing Highway Patrol

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Former Highway Safety Director Donald D. Cook Wednesday accused Gov. James A. Rhodes of politically abusing the Highway Patrol.

Cook, ousted from the post last December by Rhodes, noted at least 70 troopers have resigned since the first of the year, and said the main reason is that they feel they are "being abused by the present administration ... being used politically."

"Favoritism has become the key to promotion. The men felt they have no way to voice their opinions on disciplinary matters. It might be good to bring in some new blood at the top instead of being locked into promoting from the ranks," Cook said.

A former patrolman himself, Cook said morale slumped after troopers "became aware the entire operation was being directed from the governor's office."

Cook said his opposition to this was a major reason for his ouster as head of the patrol.

Rhodes was out of town Wednesday and unavailable for comment.

Col. Adam Reiss, patrol superintendent, conceded he is concerned about the number of resignations. But he rejected Cook's analysis of the situation.

"I'm not sure the patrol is becoming any more political than it ever has been. Governors have come and governors have gone, but the patrol has lasted and gained a good reputation," Reiss said.

"I emphatically deny any political influence on our investigations. By and large, the vast majority of troopers have high morale," Reiss added.

The superintendent said the patrol's August sick leave rate was less than one-third the average rate for state employees, and the 6 per cent resignation rate was half that of private industry.

Reiss said family pressure against troopers having to work holidays, weekends and nights probably is the biggest reason for most of the resignations.

As to reports that some troopers feel they need the Fraternal Order of Police or a similar organization to represent them, Reiss said:

"I've neither encouraged nor discouraged troopers belonging to the FOP. But we don't need it to represent them. I have made it a point to get into the field to talk with the men and find out what their needs are and explain what we are doing. They're encouraged to speak up."

There currently are 1,175 state troopers. The patrol is authorized to have 1,220 troopers.

Senate eyes Carter gas plan and rival proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is ready to choose between President Carter's plan to continue price controls on natural gas and a rival proposal to lift them.

After days of maneuvering, those on both sides of the issue agreed to schedule a showdown vote for tonight. Advocates of deregulation were predicting victory by at least a four-vote margin. Administration allies were saying the vote is too close to call.

If the Senate votes for deregulation of new natural gas, as it did in 1975, it would be another blow to a Carter energy program that already has been decimated by Senate floor and committee action.

The House has approved the administration plan to continue price controls on gas and to raise the ceiling from $1.45 per thousand cubic feet to about $1.75. The bill also would extend the controls to the now unregulated intrastate markets in Texas, Louisiana and other gas-producing states.

Meanwhile, the Senate Finance Committee began piecing together a compromise Wednesday to allow Carter to salvage a crucial part of his energy-tax program.

The compromise crude oil tax plan would rule out the President's proposal for rebates for most Americans but would provide federal aid to energy producers and finance a wide variety of transit and energy conservation programs.

The test vote on gas deregulation was set on a proposal by Sens. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, and James B. Pearson, R-Kan., to lift immediately interstate controls on newly produced onshore gas and to phase them out over a five-year period for new offshore gas.

112-room lodge. Included in the construction plans for the lodge are 25 housekeeping cabins, all of which will take about two and a half years to build. The cost of the lodge complex has been estimated at about $11.5 million and will be financed through the revenue bonds.

The detailed construction plans and specifications for the lodge, being prepared by the Cincinnati architectural firm P.D.T. and Co., are 65 to 70 per cent complete, the deputy director said.

With the expected passage of the capital improvements bill through the Senate, Rehbolz added that the department should be ready to sell revenue bonds and let construction bids for the lodge and golf course sometime this winter.

UNSEEN FACTORS

When you consider buying a home in a new locality, you'll want to know as much about the town and neighborhood as possible. Much of this information you can get from "eyeballing" the area, but there are important factors which the eye cannot see.

For example, local property taxes, public services, public transportation, hospitals, churches, community facilities. What are the zoning restrictions? Are there any unusual deed restrictions common to the area on how you might use, alter, or expand your property? What are the future prospects for the neighborhood?

A good, local Realtor can be a quarry of such information. He should have a feeling born of the familiarity for the specific neighborhoods in his territory. Level with him at the outset about what you want and he'll do his darndest to help you find it. That's what he's there for.

Fostering Ulster violence

President Carter's recent tender of his good offices in dealing with Northern Ireland's agonizing struggle has been obscured by the Panama Canal and Bert Lance controversies. What Mr. Carter had to say deserves better than that.

The President, speaking a couple of weeks after Queen Elizabeth's state visit to Ulster, was careful to stress that the U.S. policy of neutrality would be continued. At the same time, he promised that once the political differences were resolved the United States would help to develop job-creating investment which could be expected to ease the worst cause of Catholic-Protestant friction.

Americans need not simply mark time until this comes about. Some of them, at any rate, have it in their power to speed the day: they can do so by halting their misguided support of (in the President's words) "organizations whose involvement...in this violence delays the day when the people...can live and work together in harmony."

Sadly enough, unofficial American aid to the combatants in Northern Ireland has prolonged the interminable bloodshed. More specifically, it has been the chief source of money and arms for the provisional IRA, whose fanatical rejection of reason and compromise - matched by a similar attitude among extremists on the other side - has kept the deadly violence going.

At about the time of the queen's visit, the Democratic party's executive committee foolishly adopted - by voice vote, without substantive discussion of the issues involved - a resolution extolling the IRA's supposed "struggle for freedom." The "provos" are engaged in nothing of the sort: only a perpetuation of violence that impedes rational talks looking to a settlement.

Americans who have been seduced by this sort of ethnic politics had better stop and reflect on the consequences. Portraying the murderous violence in Northern Ireland as a "struggle for freedom," and sending money and guns to keep the fire hot, only helps to prolong the agony. The situation demands peacemaking, not encouragement of more bloodshed.

Suffering from 'Panama fever'

In the 1880s everybody in France was catching "Panama Fever." The "Compagnie du Canal Interocéanique," headed by Ferdinand de Lesseps of Suez Canal fame, seemed like a sure winner. Peasants withdrew money from the mattress, bourgeois went behind the brick in the fireplace, and bankers, who have not changed much in a century, borrowed from themselves and each others. The outcome demonstrated the wisdom of the "Maxim": Fools and their money are some party. The Company collapsed suddenly in Feb., 1889. A subsequent investigation revealed incredible corruption - huge bribes to the press and politicians - but the guilty were mostly saved by the statute of limitations.

Now "Panama Fever" of a different strain seems to be sweeping Washington. From the frenzied atmosphere generated by President Carter, you might think the Senate vote on the two treaties was scheduled for next Thursday. In fact, given the doggedness of some right-wing opponents, the Administration will be lucky to get an answer before March. Once again Mr. Carter has demonstrated his belief that in politics the gold cup goes to the sprinter; history would suggest he put his money on the long-distance runner.

I think it was Secretary of State John Hay who dourly observed that one-third of the Senate would vote against the Sermon on the Mount. This is a bit unfair in general, but relevant to the Panama issue. As Ronald Reagan demonstrated last year in the Republican presidential primaries, pushing the Panama button turns on all sorts of atavistic alarms. The Canal constituency, like the "Right to Life" configuration, may not be massive in quantitative terms, but its intensity is fearful to behold. Moreover, unlike the bulk of the electorate, it will never forgive and forget.

In contrast, supporters of the treaties, myself among them, have to make an essentially abstract appeal, have to justify giving away something for the benefit of the long-range national interest. The support of the Organization of American States isn't worth a nickel, and polls increasingly indicate that President Carter's popularity is non-transferable.

Thus a Senator, unless he has strong convictions and remarkable moral stamina, is likely to emerge at voting time with a fail-safe position: certainly he believes in improving relations with Panama, shares the President's concern over Latin-American opinion, but...the "buts" can cover the waterfront: inadequate guarantees against the Panamanians pulling a "Nasser" and seizing the Canal, disapproval of the human rights record of General Omar Torrijos, too much compensation, etc., etc. Why risk the enmity of those Canal nuts if all you get in return is support from Roche and other spokesmen for the "long-run" As Keynes said, "In the long-run, we're all dead."

If Mr. Carter would borrow Clark Clifford from Bert Lance for some political advice, he might learn a good deal about the pickle he is in. For instance, Clifford could give him chapter and verse citations on the ease with which Senators can extricate themselves from seemingly solid commitments. As Lyndon Johnson once observed, "It's great to have them with you on the take-off, but don't forget they all carry parachutes." In short, getting approval (not ratification - the President ratifies treaties after Senate approval; it is a separate stage) is going to be a long, hard fight. If Mr. Carter keeps treating it as a dash, he will probably collapse when he hits the 440 mark, still far from the finish.

The quest for the quick fix has already generated a major strategic blunder. Although the Constitution provides that Congress has the right to dispose of U.S. property, the President has decided to blind-side the House of Representatives. There are, as usual, some precedents for such evasive action, but in my judgment it is both unconstitutional and stupid. Not only does it violate the plain language of Article IV, but it side-steps an opportunity to build cumulative support for the Panama determinations. Only a majority is required in House and Senate to dispose of property.

The opponents would go through their incantation of horrors, time would be lost, but in the end a majority would surely support the President, giving him a leg up on the two-thirds endorsement needed in the Senate. It would also provide the opposition a chance to commit the mortal sin of American politics: To bore the sovereign people. By the time they reran their horror story in the Senate, the populace would support the treaties just to shut them off.

Oklahoma Baptists shocked over sex change operations

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — An Oklahoma Baptist church leader says church members were shocked to learn that sex change operations have been conducted at Baptist Medical Center. He says action will be taken to stop the surgery.

The hospital's board of directors had voted in favor of the operations, but suspended them this summer at the request of Baptist church officials after complaints from an unidentified rural preacher who had learned of the operations.

"This is more than a medical issue," said the Rev. Richard B. Douglass, president of the Baptist General Convention of Oklahoma. "The ultimate problem is that when we own an institution, we are publicly identified with what happens there."

The Rev. Mr. Douglass predicted that when the convention's hospital committee meets Oct. 6 it will vote "strongly against" continuation of the operations.

Some church officials said that if the operations are not vetoed next month there may be a floor fight over the issue at the state convention's annual meeting in November.

The Rev. Mr. Douglass said that from a theological standpoint, the Baptist church firmly believes that the "wholeness" of the individual can't be achieved through a physical change, but only a spiritual change.

"I am sure the average member of the average Baptist Church in Oklahoma would feel very negatively about this kind of operation," he said.

There are 600,000 Baptists in Oklahoma, about one-fourth the state's population.

Dr. David W. Foerster, a surgeon at the Baptist Medical Center who has performed sex change operations, says he is confident that the operations will be resumed.

News reports have listed Oklahoma City as among the nation's top centers for sex change operations. Since 1973, about 50 such operations have been performed at the Baptist hospital. Hospital officials have said there is a waiting list of 50 patients.

An undisclosed number of sex change operations have been performed at Oklahoma City's University Hospital, affiliated with the University of Oklahoma.

Dear Abby:

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Dad accepts son's right to be gay

DEAR ABBY: This is to thank you for your enlightened attitude about homosexuals.

I am the father of two sons and a daughter. My youngest son is gay, and when I first learned of it, I spent a lot of time worrying and wondering why. His mother died when he was 7, and his older brother and sister and I might have overprotected him, but I doubt if that was the cause. I think the pattern was set much earlier.

Whatever the reason, he was my son with his first breath, and he will be my son until his last. I am as caring and proud of him as I am of my other children. With minimal effort, I soon became as comfortable with his friends as with those of my other children. We all live some distance apart, but there is warmth and affection whenever the family is together.

My second grandson is named for him - and this was done after we learned the news.

Just as his brother, sister and I take for granted his standing by one of us if the need arose, so can he be certain we will stand by him. We are a family. What a wonderful feeling.

SIGNED, BUT NAME WITHHELD
DEAR SIGNED: Your youngest son is fortunate to have a family such as yours. What a pity there aren't more people with your understanding and compassion.

DEAR ABBY: Junior has been living at home since he was graduated from college three years ago. (He's 25.)

He works for me (I'm his father) and makes excellent wages. The problem is how to get rid of him.

He's practically engaged to a very nice girl who lives 300 miles from here, but we're afraid he'll never marry her as long as he has all the comforts of home. We don't charge him room or board.

It's not the money: it's the fact that he doesn't want the responsibility of taking care of himself. Several times in the last two years, he has talked about taking an apartment with another fellow, but he's always backed out at the last minute.

We've dropped subtle hints, but to no avail. His mother and I agree that if Junior moved, it would be better for him and better for us.

How can we tell him (politely) to leave?

FT. WAYNE FATHER

DEAR FATHER: Talk turkey! Tell him he has until Thanksgiving to find another pad. And say, "Please!"

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married for 18 years and have six wonderful children.

I have never been the suspicious type, but something has really got me thinking lately. About four months ago, my husband went on a business trip and stayed five days when he was supposed to be gone only three days. He phoned me from out of town and said he would be detained, but didn't explain why.

Well, ever since that trip, he has gone to confession every week! Before the trip he went to confession only twice a year. I am going crazy wondering what he has to confess.

Do you think that something happened on that trip that is sending him to confession? How should I handle it? Should I ask him? Or should I let the matter ride?

GOING CRAZY

DEAR GOING: Let the matter ride, and pray that he only cheated on his income tax.

CONFIDENTIAL TO SILENT SAM IN TEXAS: To pretend that you believe a liar is a lie, too.

Today In History

By The Associated Press
Today is Thursday, Sept. 22, the 265th day of 1977. There are 100 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On this date in 1949, the Soviet Union exploded its first atomic bomb, four years after the first American nuclear detonation. On this date:

In 1776, Nathan Hale was hanged by the British as a spy. He is quoted as saying "I only regret that I have but one life to lose for my country" as he was led to the gallows in New York.

In 1862, President Abraham Lincoln issued the preliminary Emancipation Proclamation.

In 1961, the Interstate Commerce Commission issued rules forbidding racial discrimination in interstate bus transportation.

In 1965, a cease-fire was declared in a war between India and Pakistan over Kashmir.

In 1973, Henry Kissinger was sworn in as Secretary of State, becoming the first naturalized citizen to gain the office.

Ten years ago: The British liner, Queen Mary, sailed from New York on its last trans-Atlantic voyage after more than 30 years in service.

Five years ago: The U.N. General Assembly agreed to discuss the problem of terrorism despite objections by Arab nations.

One year ago: The U.S. Viking spacecraft discovered that the planet Mars had a polar ice cap of frozen water.

Today's birthdays: Actress Martha Scott is 61 years old. Socialite Alfred Vanderbilt is 65.

Thought for today: Things do not change, we do — Henry David Thoreau, American writer, 1817-1862. —

For love of Humphrey, full employment measure may pass

By JACK ANDERSON
WASHINGTON — The ailing Sen. Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn., demonstrating why he is called the happy warrior, responded to the news that he has terminal cancer by visiting other patients in his hospital wing and offering them cheerful encouragement. He also passed around his flowers and candy to patients who didn't receive any.

Such an attitude is typical of this warm, sensitive man who has endeared himself to his Washington colleagues. It may explain why they want to do something for Hubert and why, therefore, full employment legislation may pass Congress.

The word is spreading on Capitol Hill that the ebullient Humphrey wants eagerly to make one final, lasting contribution to the country. He wants to provide more jobs for his fellow men who are out of work. He has joined Rep. Augustus Hawkins, D-Calif., in sponsoring a bill calculated to achieve full employment.

It may have a slight flavor of the 1930s, with its provisions to use grants, loans, tax breaks and other fiscal devices to create more jobs. But suddenly the Humphrey-Hawkins bill is given a good chance to pass.

No less than Jimmy Carter is quietly preparing to throw his weight behind the bill. His top assistants have been in touch with aides of Humphrey and Hawkins. The staffs are now meeting daily, and a final agreement is expected in a few days. "The president has personally accelerated the timetable on this," one participant told us.

Such heavyweights as Labor Secretary Ray Marshall, domestic policymaker Stuart Eizenstat and economic adviser Charles Shultz are now involved in the negotiations. Once a tentative agreement is reached, the president will discuss the final details personally with Humphrey and Hawkins.

There remains a major conflict over the bill's goal of driving down unemployment to four per cent. Just about everyone who wants to work should be able to get a job, allowing for the constant number between jobs, if the four per cent goal can be achieved.

But some White House aides believe the figure may be unrealistically low. "The president doesn't like the idea of being tied to a specific number," one presidential assistant told our associate Howie Kurtz. "He wants to make a good-faith effort to reach the goal without having his hands tied by a rigid timetable."

The bill would provide the monetary means to create more jobs. Federal funds, for example, would be awarded to private companies for needed public works projects. This would be supplemented by public service jobs and government training programs.

But if these efforts should fall short of the four per cent goal, then the federal government would become the "employer of last resort." It would provide temporary, low-paying jobs to those who can't find work elsewhere.

The White House objects to this provision. "You can't legislate full employment," complained one Carter adviser. "You can't have a legally enforceable plan where an unemployed person can go into court and say, 'Judge, I want a job.'"

Explained another White House official: "First we want to test the idea of large-scale public service jobs." Before the government does any more hiring, he said, the president wants to try out his planned 1.4 million welfare jobs and 200,000 youth jobs.

Congressional backers argued, however, that the "last resort" jobs are not automatic and would be created only if the president and Congress decide they are needed.

The two sides are also negotiating over the role of the Federal Reserve Board, which controls the nation's monetary policy. Under the bill, the Fed would be required to certify to Congress whether its monetary policy will help achieve full employment. But congressional liberals believe that the nation's growth is being stymied by the crafty, conservative Fed chairman, Arthur Burns.

"For years, economic policy has been made in the backrooms by Arthur Burns and a few private bankers who sit on the Fed," complained one congressional expert. "This bill would take economic policy out of the backrooms and put it on the floor of Congress."

Agreed one presidential assistant: "Nowhere in the Constitution does it say that bankers shall have a branch of the federal government." But he added: "While we don't mind if Congress conflicts with the Fed, it would be a major political battle for the administration to infringe on the independence of the Fed."

Some of Carter's economic advisers are also worried that the legislation will fuel inflation. "The inflation problem is very real," a White House economist told us.

Humphrey and Hawkins insist, however, that lower unemployment doesn't necessarily lead to more inflation. For each one per cent reduction in the jobless rolls, they say, the government saves about $20 billion in unemployment checks, food stamps and other benefits. "This bill will help Carter balance his budget," said a supporter.

A compromise between the two sides, nevertheless, is in the offing. And President Carter will come out fighting for a national commitment to full employment.

Who's News - A big-time corporation lawyer, Milton Handler, is expected to direct a presidential study of the antitrust laws. He was described by Attorney General Griffin Bell as "A superstar in antitrust law." But our files show this same Handler testified twice against the 1975 Antitrust Improvements Act. It turns out that Handler has also represented big corporations in antitrust cases.

REPLACEMENT FOR SLIDING GLASS DOORS

Atrium doors are the sensible solution to rising energy cost. Double pane insulated glass prevents icy cold build up and excess heat transfer. The operating door "swings" wide open... no fighting or struggling like sliding doors, and a virtually tamper-proof dead bolt lock adds extra security. The unitized construction adds strength and rigidity. Heavy duty screen door on steel ball bearing rollers for trouble-free operation. Decorative, removable grilles available for added beauty and versatility.

Eyman Park setting for reunion

Members of the family of the late Jacob and Minnie Whaley gathered in Eyman Park for the first reunion in many years. The eldest relative attending was Mrs. Myrtle Bartruff from Washington C. H. The couple married the longest were Mr. and Mrs. Lester Shoemaker, and the youngest was one year-old, Jamie Smith of Columbus. The couple who traveled the greatest distance for the reunion were Mr. and Mrs. Michael Dearth and daughter, Chalia, of Tampa, Fla.

A brief business meeting was conducted by Wesley Ruth of New Holland, and a picnic dinner followed.

Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Henry Zimmerman of Mansfield; Mr. and Mrs. Pearl Chamberlain, Mr. and Mrs. Randall Chamberlain and children, Mr. and Mrs. Terry Chamberlain and daughter, Mrs. Pam Smith and children of Derby; Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Zimmerman, Mrs. Ronald Zimmerman and Bridget, and Miss Janet Zimmerman of Columbus; Mr. and Mrs. Dewey Camp, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Pugh of Hamden; Neal Gerrig, Devoada Gerrig, and Gary Beaty of Cincinnati; Belinda Torris of Michigan; Mrs. Janet Swyar, Danny, Chris, Bridgett, Ruth and Kyle of Logan; Mr. Eugene Whaley and Tina of London; Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Ruth and son of New Holland;

Those from Washington C. H. were Mr. and Mrs. Gene Dearth, Mrs. David Roberts and children, Jean, Jenny and Donald, Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Dearth and Dienne, Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Grey, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ruth and children, Mr. and Mrs. Dick Ruth and children, Mrs. Rebecca Lowe, Mrs. Pauline Dowler, Mr. Charles Whaley, Mrs. Ethel Marshall, Mr. and Mrs. Layton Shoemaker and family, Mr. and Mrs. William Adams, Mrs. Ray Whaley, Mrs. Shirley Bellar, Mrs. Penny Terry band son, Mrs. Sue Gray and Shawn, Von, and Kristi, Mrs. Nancy Stodgel, Bruce, Randy, and Dennis, Paul Whaley, Patti Shoemaker Albright, Mr. Mr. and Mrs. William Ruth and son, J. R. and Mrs. Violet Adams of Good Hope.

Queen Esther officers named

The Queen Esther Class of First Christian Church met with Mrs. Ona Miller for a meeting. Assisting hostesses were Mrs. Hazel McNorton, Mrs. Esta Swartz, and Mrs. Exa Breakfield.

The business session was conducted by Mrs. Mabel Whitmer, and Mrs. Lucy Sells' devotion was from Psalm 121, and the poem "How to Grow in a Christian Life."

Nine members and one guest, Mrs. William Rockhold, were present. Officers for the year are: President - Mrs. Whitmer; vice president - Mrs. Lucy Sells; secretary - Mrs. Blanche Pursell; treasurer - Mrs. Wilma VanWey; and news reporter - Mrs. Leora Graham.

Cards were signed for the ill and shutins, and donations made to the South Side Prayer Breakfast and to First Christian Church.

Refreshments were served by the hostesses to Mrs. Sells, Mrs. Whitmer, Mrs. VanWey, Mrs. Pursell, Mrs. Edith Miller, Mrs. Bessie Reeves, Mrs. Marie Doan, Mrs. Graham, Mrs. William Rockhold and Mrs. Miller.

Auxiliary holds meeting

Twelve ladies assembled at Anderson's Restaurant on Sunday for a meeting and to form and charter the Fayette County Unit 89, Disabled American Veterans Auxiliary.

Officers elected for the year 1977-78 are: Naomi L. Ernst, Commander; Nellie M. Newland, Senior Vice Commander; Geraldine N. Reed, Junior Vice Commander; Kathryn E. Stephens, Chaplain; Oma M. Mills, Conductress; and Joyce E. Minnix-Adjutant and Treasurer.

Charter members are Janette E. Bradley, Mary C. Dawes, Sharon E. Downard, Helen M. Ernst, Naomi L. Ernst, Connie J. Jones, Oma M. Mills, Joyce E. Minnix, Nellie M. Neland, Judythe Ann Reeves, Geraldine N. Reed and Kathryn E. Stephens.

Debbie Srofe tells of life at Butler Springs

Debbie Srofe and Lydia Hale were guests of the Kings Daughters Class of First Christian Church, when 12 members assembled with Mrs. Mary E. Stackhouse for a meeting.

Mrs. Carl Meriweather conducted the meeting and read The Beautiful in Life, followed by devotion by Mrs. Elizabeth Hall. All sang Jesus, the Very Thought of Thee, read a personal experience of Dr. Norman Vincent Peale and a reading by Doris King.

The Miracle of Babel was presented by Miss Margaret Gison, with various members participating.

Debbie told of her stay at Butler Springs Christian Camp, which the class helped sponsor. She gave a good report of the activities of the camp, and told how much she had enjoyed the week there.

Each responded to roll call by telling what she wanted to be when she grew older. Reports were made and cards signed for the ill and shutins. Redecorating the church nursery was discussed and it was announced that books, games, shelves and money with which to purchase these items be made known. A donation for the choir robes for the Sunlight Chorus was also discussed.

The class is planning to conduct the opening service for the Oct. 9 meeting. The next meeting will be with Elizabeth Fullerton and Norman Flee will be the assisting hostess.

The bakeless bake sale netted a good sum for the class treasury.

Personals

Mr. and Mrs. Milton K. Gammons of Naples, Fla., were houseguests of Mr. and Mrs. Ben P. Wood, 554 Mayfair Drive, from Tuesday through Friday of last week. On Friday, Mrs. Wood's stepson, Mr. E. B. Dowell of Sacramento, Calif., arrived and visited through Sunday. Mr. Dowell was en route home from Washington, D. C., from a business trip.

BUFFET SUPPER

Sliced Meat Potato Puffs
3-Pea Relish Salad Rolls
Chocolate Roll Coffee

3-PEA RELISH SALAD

Our inspiration was obviously the well-known 3-bean combination.

20-ounce can chick peas, drained and rinsed
16-ounce can black eye peas, drained and rinsed
17-ounce can green peas, drained

Medium onion, finely chopped (1/2 cup)
Medium green pepper, finely chopped (about 3/4 cup)

1/2 cup sugar
1/2 cup salad oil
1 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper

Two 3 1/2-ounce jars cocktail onions (undrained), if desired

In a shallow container stir together all the ingredients; cover tightly and chill. May be served on lettuce and garnished with cherry tomatoes or pimiento and sliced cucumbers. Makes about 1 1/2 quarts when lightly drained - 12 servings. Keeps well. (If cocktail onions are not used, you may want to add a little more vinegar.)

WASHINGTON CHOWDER
Adapted from a 1930 cookbook, this delicious soup is quick and easy to make.

1 1/4 cups pared, diced potato
1/4 cup diced onion (1 small)
2 cups water
4 teaspoons chicken bouillon granules

8-ounce can stewed tomatoes
8-ounce can whole-kernel corn, undrained
3/4 cup light cream

Salt and pepper to taste
Gently boil together the potato, onion, water and chicken bouillon granules until the potatoes are tender. Stir in remaining ingredients and heat to serving temperature but do not boil. Makes about 1 1/4 quarts.

CHRISTINE PINES' MEAT LOAF
Repeated by request.

1 cup herb-seasoned bread stuffing, from an 8-ounce bag
1/4 cup milk
1/2 cup chili sauce
1 egg
1 teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon pepper

1 1/4 pounds ground beef round, 2 1/2 cups packed down
2 ribs celery, finely chopped (1 scant cup)

In a medium mixing bowl stir together the bread stuffing, milk, chili sauce, egg, salt and pepper until bread is thoroughly moistened and pastelike. Add beef and celery; mix with hands until blended. Line a small baking pan (11 by 7 by 1 1/2 inches) with foil. Turn meat mixture into pan and shape into an 8-by 4-inch loaf. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven about 1 hour. Makes 6 servings.

Engagement announced

MISS CONNIE LAMB

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Lamb of Carlisle, wish to announce the engagement of their daughter, Connie Sue, to Jay Jett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Jett of 1012 Lakeview Ave.

Miss Lamb is a senior at Carlisle High school. Her fiancé, a graduate of Washington Senior High School, is a sophomore at Ohio University, Athens.

A date for the wedding has not been set.

St. Colman Women's Club activities

The first fall meeting of the Women's Club of Saint Colman Catholic Church was held Monday in Colman Hall. Mrs. George Spilker, president, opened the meeting with a welcome to all members, old and new. Following the introduction of new officers and members, Mrs. Robert Pero gave an inspirational reading entitled "Your Expression," and offered prayer.

The business meeting included the reading of the minutes by Mrs. Paul Ondrus, the treasurer report by Mrs. Sam Pyrsasznuik and a report from the redecorating committee by Mrs. Pero. This report included the approximate cost of new drapes and floor covering for the hall. It was decided to continue with the project. Father David Petry then discussed long range plans for the parish, such as possibly changing from gas to fuel oil as fuel for the heating system. Several notes were read from 1977 Seniors expressing their appreciation for the breakfast given them last May.

Mrs. Spilker announced some plans for the coming year, which includes a card party to be held in Colman Hall Oct. 5 at 7:30 p. m. A variety of card games will be played including funny bridge. Complete tables or individual players are welcome. There will be prizes: one is a macrame witch and the other a jack-o-lantern. Tickets are $1.25 with refreshments included.

A bake sale will be held during the Murphy Mart Charity Festival on Oct. 15, at Murphy Mart. Mrs. Jay Smith is the chairman.

The Thanksgiving clothing drive will be in charge of Mrs. Tom Gaudin and the annual bazaar with the theme of "Mittens for Kiddens" will be held Dec. 1. Bake sales will also be held around Valentine's Day and on Palm Sunday. Mrs. Spilker also told of plans for a letter to be sent to all women parishioners and a new "Share Your Birthday" plan in which members will visit the shutins during the month of the members' birthday. Mrs. Larry Johnson told the club of the need for entertaining programs for the nursing homes. Appreciation was expressed from the Carnegie Public Library for the donation of the book, "Sign Language for Everyone."

The meeting was adjourned and all enjoyed a dessert smorgasbord during the social hour.

The next meeting will be Oct. 17.

Hickory Lane Ladies meet

The ladies of the Hickory Lane Church of Christ held a meeting Monday evening at the church with Mrs. Willard Bainter giving the opening prayer. Each had read a Scripture verse from the Book of First Corinthians containing the word "wife." Mrs. Robert Johnson presided during the business meeting and Mrs. Paul Keller acted as secretary. Mrs. Bertha Riley was elected the new Missionary officer to replace Mrs. Fred Tracy who is moving from the area.

An invitation for a Women's Retreat for Oct. 14 and 15 at the Jamestown Church of Christ was read, and plans for a carry-in dinner for the Homecoming on Oct. 2 were made. A card was signed for Mrs. Tom Vandyne.

Mrs. Keller presented devotions concerning a wife. She then served refreshments to Mrs. George Pierce, Mrs. Bainter, Mrs. Riley, Mrs. Eddie Foy and daughter, Jennifer, and Mrs. Johnson.

Although Celeste may announce before Thanksgiving

Fuzzy picture still lurks over 1978 gubernatorial race

By TOM DIEMER
Associated Press Writer
 COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Just when the field for the 1978 governor's campaign starts to come into focus, the picture seems to get fuzzy, usually due to circumstances beyond the control of the political observer.

Lt. Gov. Richard F. Celeste, whose candidacy has been in focus for some three years, received high marks on the whole for his performance during a live television question and answer phone-in show.

Celeste insiders now say the lieutenant governor will probably make his candidacy for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination official sometime before Thanksgiving.

Meanwhile, House Speaker Vernal G. Riffe Jr., D-28 New Boston, is edging ever closer to a candidacy.

"I'm not a candidate for governor yet — I said yet," he told an informal gathering of newsmen recently. "I may well be a candidate."

Riffe has no doubt about Celeste's intentions and also says he's sure that his Senate counterpart, Majority Leader Oliver Ocasek, D-27 Akron, "is very serious about" running. Ocasek, who has made no announcement, has opened a campaign office in Summit County.

Atty. Gen. William J. Brown, who like Celeste has figured in speculation almost since election to his current post in 1974, is lined up with Riffe as a moderate to conservative type. Celeste and Ocasek are regarded as liberals.

Discussion on the Republican side has been more muted because of the widely held belief that 68-year-old Gov. James A. Rhodes will seek an unprecedented fourth term.

"There's no doubt in my mind from the past two or three months that the governor is going to run for re-election," says Riffe, a long-time Rhodeswatcher who shares southeast Ohio roots with the governor.

In the event that Rhodes doesn't run, House Minority Leader Charles F. Kurfess, R-83 Perrysburg, is ready to fill any vacuum. He is the only "announced candidate" from either major party.

That's the picture, according to conventional political wisdom, at this point.

But at the state Democratic dinner last week, newsmen gauging the applause as potential candidates were introduced, noted that Treasurer Gertrude Donahey received an ovation equal or greater than most of the others. Mrs. Donahey has given no indication that she is interested in any position other than the office she currently holds.

Former Gov. John J. Gilligan, apparently secure as President Carter's director of the Agency for International Development, is out of the picture. But another former Democratic governor present at the Democratic banquet caught reporters' attention when he received the biggest round of applause of the night — a standing ovation.

Former Gov. Michael V. DiSalle, who maintains a successful law practice in Washington, has kept his Toledo voting address. He has said nothing about retiring from politics.

For a real longshot, try Leroy Jenkins, the Delaware, Ohio, evangelist who said earlier he would run for governor as an independent — but now says he will seek the Democratic nomination.

High court gets lawyer ad guides

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio lawyers soon may have guidelines for advertising their services and fees and even if they accept credit cards.

A list of 20 recommendations on what lawyers may or may not put in newspaper and magazine advertisements was submitted Wednesday to the Supreme Court by the Ohio State Bar Association.

The nine-page, double-spaced document "starts off saying that a lawyer can't do any advertising containing false, fraudulent, misleading, deceptive, self-laudatory or unfair statements or claims," said Gary Hunt, director of media relations for the state association.

"These (guidelines) basically involve the print media at this point,"

Hunt said. "We are looking into and definitely need some help" in preparing recommendations for the more complicated advertising on radio and television.

The recommendations, which are expected to be the basis of formal guidelines adopted by the court, generally spell out what a lawyer may or may not put into an advertisement.

These include such things as what fields of law the attorney practices, the fee for an initial consultation, fixed fees for such services as drawing up a will or filing an uncontested divorce, the attorney's hourly rate and special contingent fees.

One item would allow the attorney to say if he accepts credit cards.

If a lawyer should violate whatever guidelines the Supreme Court finally adopts, he would be subject to penalties ranging from permanent disbarment to a private reprimand, Hunt said.

There have been about nine or 10 lawyers in Ohio who have been advertising in newspapers since the U.S. Supreme Court ruled recently that the practice did not violate judicial ethics, he said.

Hunt could not predict when the guidelines would be handed down by the state court, but said it probably would be soon since they are being treated as emergency measures because none now exist. They also would be only temporary "until we get things worked out" and permanent guides can be enacted.

Dr. Sidney L. Pressey of Ohio State University built the world's first teaching machine in 1925, an instrument that awarded students with candy for correct answers. —AP

Among 13 states

Ohio's lottery ranks 3rd in instant sales

CLEVELAND — The Ohio Lottery finds itself in third place among the 13 lottery states in instant lottery ticket sales.

Sales of over 60 million from Instant Game II places Ohio behind only Michigan and New York for the year, with Ohio Instant III sales starting last week. In regular 50-cent and $1 weekly game sales, Ohio is third in gross sales, slightly behind Michigan and Pennsylvania.

Modern lottery sales started in 1964 in New Hampshire, with Vermont about to become the 14th American member of the National Association of State Lotteries. Lotto Quebec, Atlantic Lottery and Ontario Lottery are Canadian members. At the close of fiscal year 1977, lottery sales totaled over $5 billion, 50 million dollars for the U.S. lotteries, and over $2.2 billion has been returned to the states as revenue from sales. New York will reach $1 billion in total sales this year, its 10th year of operation. For 1978, overall revenue projections for the 13 U.S. State Lotteries are that 25 per cent of sales will come from the weekly game, 35 per cent from instant games, and 40 per cent of the overall revenue will come from the pick-your-own-number type daily lotteries, now played in eight states. By 1980, these 13 lottery states will be returning net revenues of over $1 billion per year to their parent states.

Gerald J. Patronite, starting his third year as director of the lottery, reports that Ohio's gross sales from August 1974 have totaled over $375 million and with gross revenue to the state totals over $160 million.

New term produced by hooker CB use

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (AP) — The increasing use of citizens band radio by prostitutes has produced a new term for an old disease. Officials call it "CBVD" for venereal disease spread by prostitutes using the airwaves to make dates.

"When you have a prostitution house, you know where it is. But with the CB, everybody involved is more elusive," said Ronald Bryant, head of the venereal disease section of the state Health Department.

TV Viewing

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Rosetti and Ryan" is a new NBC series. It stars Tony Roberts and Squire Fridell as two wise-cracking bachelor lawyers. The barristers make a premiere plea of "watch me" tonight.

But you, the jury, should first consider all the evidence. It is found in a blunt instrument called the script. I enter it now as Exhibit "A" in a lengthy proceeding lasting an hour.

The script is about a flaky actress played by Julie Cobb. She sends our two tort-mongers a $1,000 retainer fee and tickets to a $100-a-plate bar association dinner.

Chief speaker at the event is a pro football quarterback, played by Robert Hogan. Attorney Rosetti doesn't want to attend the dinner. He says no one will be there but athletes and lawyers, a dull lot.

But Ryan says "where there are jocks there are pretty girls."

As the defendants are known to chase pretty girls, they go to the dinner. There, they meet their benefactor, who tells them she is the "Muffin" lady in a TV commercial. She then says:

"Excuse me, I want to blast him before I get drunk."

Whereupon she withdraws a .45 and puts several rounds across the bow of the quarterback. It is stipulated she wanted to scare him and make him publicly confess he is an "all-time rat."

It is further stipulated the alleged rat conned her into appearing in a movie that, with clever editing, he turned into a porn film called "Lust Horizons." She alleges it cost her the "Muffin" job.

At this point, entered as Exhibit "B," she is charged with assault with a deadly weapon and is defended by the defendants.

Alas, the case is assigned actor Dick O'Neill, cast as Judge "Hang-Em-High" Hardcastle. He is a fan of the quarterback and was the master of ceremonies at the dinner featuring the .45 appetizers.

In the rest of the hour, there occur twists and turns that we contend were deliberately created to willfully, unlawfully and perhaps illegally disguise the fact that this show has no plot.

During the aforesaid hereafter, which we enter as Exhibit "C," a press agent named Jim Gordon is slain at the home of his friend, the quarterback. The "Muffin" girl is accused of the deed.

Others get involved, including the widow of the deceased, whose marriage, it is alleged, was rocky on account of the deceased was fooling around with the wife of the quarterback's coach.

Blackmail and point-shaving also are alleged. The show's turning point, hereinafter referred to as "the turning point," dwells on how fast a quart of pistachio ice cream can melt.

Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, before you retire to consider deliberating the case of "Rosetti and Ryan," I should re-emphasize that this proceeding is what we in legal circles call "a real dog."

I submit that it is a willful, unlawful and perhaps illegal waste of time. I know you'll find it guilty of aggravated awful.

As the trombone player said when he missed his bus, I rest my case.

Glenn urges energy bills

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, urged his colleagues Wednesday "to be prepared for a winter at least as severe as last year's."

Glenn's comments came during a hearing of the intergovernmental relations subcommittee in Washington, probing the nation's preparedness for next winter.

"Often the American people and Congress receive assurances and glowing statistics about energy supplies, only to have those 'facts' evaporate," Glenn said.

"I believe we should be prepared for a winter at least as severe as last year's," Glenn said in a statement released by his Washington office.

He urged the Senate to pass legislation now that will insure emergency supplies of natural gas to Ohio and other industrial states if the upcoming winter proves as severe as last year.

Glenn told the hearing he will introduce an amendment to pending legislation that would authorize the Secretary of Energy to order conversions of power plants and other major fuel burning installations from natural gas to oil during natural gas emergencies. Such conversions could be ordered only during natural gas supply emergencies declared by the President.

"Memories of closing of large segments of American industry because of natural gas shortages are only too recent," Glenn said. "Schools closed, plants shut down, workers lost their jobs...500,000 in Ohio alone...because of the inability to allocate fair shares of natural gas."

Bank robbery brings a tear to the eye

EAST WINDSOR, N.J. (AP) — The robbery of a bank here may have brought a tear to the eye of the hold-up man, especially when he realized he probably will get caught red-handed, police said.

The gunman left the Franklin State Bank with the bag of money he asked for, police said, but the bag also contained a canister of red dye that he hadn't requested.

The canister is designed to explode and emit a powder that permanently stains anything it touches.

For 1977 Christmas parade

Homemade float prizes being arranged

Christmas parade co-chairmen Rick Stinson and Bart Mahoney have announced there will be at least three prize categories for homemade floats this year. A minimum of $450 will be awarded to the top floats.

Groups wishing to enter floats are urged to contact the Washington C.H. Area Chamber of Commerce (335-0761) as soon as possible. Groups planning to make floats should not wait until they are completed, but should notify the Chamber of their intent.

At present, cash awards are planned for the best homemade float entered by a religious organization, the best by a civic group, and the best by a commercial or industrial firm. However, if there are sufficient entries, awards could also be made for other categories such as school groups, youth organizations and more. Awards will depend on the number of floats. Last year six of the 14 homemade floats entered received at least $25.

The chairmen have selected "Twas the Night Before Christmas" as the theme for the parade.

Stinson has contacted several area bands and has been encouraged by the response. The 1977 parade promises to be one of the biggest and best ever.

In order to properly arrange categories for homemade float competition, the parade chairmen hope to have all potential float entrants notify the Chamber by the first week of October. The deadline for floats and other parade unit entries has tentatively been set for Nov. 10. This will insure officials adequate time to notify all units of their parade position well in advance of the Dec. 3 parade date.

CAN YOU TOP THIS?—The float entered by the New Holland Methodist Youth Fellowship group was judged the best of the 1976 Christmas parade. In addition to the honor itself, the church group earned $125 for its organization. Cash awards for 1977 have been increased from a total of $350 to at least $450. All homemade floats will be eligible. Can your organization unseat the youth fellowship in 1977?

The best float in each category will be awarded $100. Second prize will be $50.

Man can't shake hostility memories

CINCINNATI (AP) — Harold G. Walsh, 64, can't shake the memory of hostility among Panamanians toward Americans in the Canal Zone 45 years ago.

"I knew that hatred was there," said Walsh, who served with the U.S. Army in Panama in 1932-34. "I always figured the Americans were doing a good job with the locks and all, but the Panamanians had a lot of hatred, even back then."

Walsh, now retired from the Army as a civilian employee, said his most vivid memory was of a young man, a patient in the same hospital where Walsh was hospitalized with malaria. The man explained his hate for Americans.

"How would you feel if your sister or mother had to go out and hustle to feed your family," Walsh quoted the man.

Walsh said the man told him many Panamanian women turned to prostitution because other family members could not make a living in American-operated sugar fields.

Walsh said enlisted men at the canal did not live much better than natives.

"We got $21 a month," Walsh said. "At least that's how much we got until Mr. former President Franklin D. Roosevelt decided we were making too much. So he cut it."

He remembered racial discrimination on the post where darker natives had to use separate drinking fountains.

Even then there was fear that a single saboteur could disable the canal. "A crowbar in one hinge could put the locks out of commission," he said.

Walsh believes the Panamanians want the canal now because of communist agitation. He also thinks President Carter has put himself in a bind by placing his official prestige behind the treaty to turn over the canal to Panama.

"I hate to think of what would happen if Congress doesn't approve the treaty," he said. Walsh said he is less concerned about the future of Panama's leader, Brig. Gen. Omar Torrijos Herrera, though he is "certain violence would break out if the treaty is not approved by Congress."

His own feelings are ambivalent.

Former California Gov. Ronald Reagan pledged to keep the canal in U.S. hands during his unsuccessful bid for the Republican presidential nomination.

"You don't like to condemn the actions of Americans, but you can't talk like Mr. Reagan either. He doesn't know what he is talking about," Walsh said.

Baby name measure okayed by solons

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A newborn could be named after the mother, the father or a combination of both surnames under legislation approved 64-28 by the House Wednesday and sent to the Senate.

"I wanted to put in statutory law what's already in common law," explained Rep. David Hartley, D-60 Springfield, the sponsor.

Ohio law is largely silent on the matter of assigning surnames, Hartley said Wednesday, but the division of vital statistics has been declining to accept any name for a child, other than the father's family name.

Hartley's bill permits parents to give a child either surname, if their last name is different, or a combination of both, as in Smith-Brown.

It also allows a couple to choose either partner's surname, or a combination of the two names, when they get married.

Letters from R-H readers

EDITOR, RECORD-HERALD:

On September 8, 1977, I was arrested for driving while intoxicated, no operator's license, and speeding. All counts of which I was guilty! Being court news, my name and the offenses were listed in the Record-Herald.

On September 8, 1977, a well-known builder-of-homes was also arrested for driving while intoxicated. There is a discriminatory difference; this gentleman's name and the offense were never mentioned in the paper. Yes, there was a bond forfeiture, but where lies the difference?

It has been my belief that all men, regardless of social stature, are equal in the eyes of the law and the press. Why is discrimination shown merely because of the monetary worth of two individuals? It can't be because the builder-of-homes would suffer because he is in business for the public, so am I!

Also, why should I be ordered by the court to participate in the Laurel Oaks Program for being intoxicated and the aforementioned individual not given the same order?

It is not my intention to question or disregard the order of the Court but I do question the implications that are prevalent in my particular case. I do question the reason for intentionally failing to mete justice to all individuals, regardless.

I have never demanded more than I deserved, from the law or the press. Justice should prevail without demands!

EDITOR, RECORD-HERALD:

The Carnegie Public Library has just given our organization, The American Association of University Women, a huge donation of children's books for which we would like to publicly thank them.

I am sure the general public does not know a great deal about our program. We are a professional organization, not a social club, maintained to advance the intellectual growth of women. Our biggest project of the year is raising money for both local and national scholarships for women seeking higher education. Each year, at commencement time, we award a scholarship to a deserving woman graduate from Miami Trace or Washington Senior High School.

Our National Executive Committee has stringent guidelines concerning the kinds of money-making projects the branch organizations may participate in. One project they will sanction is a locally sponsored book fair. It is their belief that the fair is one project from which everyone profits.

As some residents of Washington C.H. may remember, we had our book fair during bargain days last July. At this time, many people who took part in our fair asked for children's books. It may amaze some, but from the hundreds of books contributed to our sale, there was not one child's book. You can imagine our delight when the public library gave us barrels of children's books.

The AAUW was not the only group to profit from this generous contribution. As Language Specialist for the Fayette Progressive School, I was able to select a few of the books for my work with the children there. Very few of the children are reading but the pictures in many of the books can teach more than the spoken word.

Again I want to thank the library, on behalf of these two separate groups, for their thoughtfulness.

Treaty opposition planned is VFW

Members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars are expected to call on the U.S. Senate to reject the Panama Canal treaty when they meet at 10 a.m. Sunday at a District 11 conference at Post 8794, Whitehall.

The Whitehall post, 4100 E. Main St., will host representatives from Union, Delaware, Licking, Madison, Franklin, Fairfield, Fayette, Pickaway and Hocking counties, representing more than 10,000 veterans. Curtis Williamson, Plain City, is the district commander.

Miniature soldiers sold by Fairbanks

LONDON (AP) — Douglas Fairbanks Jr. ordered his private army into the fray one last time, this time marching them off to auction where the 3,000 lead soldiers earned him $16,212.

Fairbanks, 67, who like his father was a swashbuckling movie hero, had to bid goodbye to his loyal band of 2-inch-tall men because he didn't have room for them in his London home. He began collecting them 55 years ago.

Businessman Alvin Whitehead of Chicago picked up a set of 21 miniature bandmen of the Royal Marines Light Infantry for $1,400 and then put down $787 for a Marine squad of 24 band escorts.

Carter decision came Tuesday

Anatomy of a resignation

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter decided sometime Tuesday that it was time to stop playing cat and mouse with the future of Bert Lance.

So Carter scheduled a long-delayed news conference, a decision that touched off a rapid series of developments that reached a climax Wednesday with his announcement that Lance, his friend, confidant and sometime banker, was resigning as director of the Office of Management and Budget.

Although many predecessors were names-without-faces so far as most Americans were concerned, Lance was much more. He was close to Carter. A lot of folks thought about him as "deputy president."

Jody Powell, the White House press secretary, in announcing the news conference, quoted his boss as saying, "Why don't we just go ahead and have one? I'm tired of moving the thing around."

When Powell was asked if these were Carter's exact words, he reported the President was "more vivid than that."

It was one sign of the emotional atmosphere around the White House when Carter decided to meet the press after holding off for a week because he wasn't ready with any firm answers about Lance's fate.

The decision to hold the news conference was closely followed by hurry-up meetings climaxed by the Lance resignation. Powell was asked afterwards if Carter had set out, in this fashion, to send Lance the message that it was time to make some basic decisions.

"Obviously, that was a possibility," Powell replied.

A few days earlier, Powell had said of a forced Lance resignation, "Certainly that would not be an easy thing for the President to do."

So there was at least an outward impression that Carter, unwilling to fire his friend to rid himself of a potential political liability, forced the issue in a way that prodded Lance into taking the initiative.

Once the news conference was scheduled, the next step involved a supposedly casual tennis match on the White House courts. It was the kind of match that only the President could engineer.

Powell announced the decision to hold the news conference at about 2 p.m. Tuesday. At 5 p.m., the President, Lance, top presidential aide Hamilton Jordan and speechwriter Jim Fallows began a round of tennis on the White House courts. The game ended at 6:30 p.m.

Jordan and Fallows departed. Carter and Lance sat, alone, on chairs near the secluded tennis court.

There, with the sun beginning to set, Lance told his longtime friend, the President, that it would be best if he left the Office of Management and Budget and returned to Georgia. However, he said he wanted to talk with his wife and his attorney.

Lance was back at the White House by 6:30 a.m. Wednesday for another talk with Carter.

Lance went to his Georgetown home for lunch with his wife, LaBelle. After lunch, the Lances came out to drive to the White House for one more talk with Carter. There was a parking ticket on Lance's windshield.

Carter had planned to begin his nationally broadcast news conference at 3 p.m. But at 2:10 p.m., after the talk with the Lances, the President and Powell decided to delay the news conference until 5 p.m.

Lance went time to consult with his attorney, Clark Clifford, about the resignation letter being prepared.

After the meeting with Carter, Lance kissed his wife goodbye. She drove home and he stayed behind in the Old Executive Office Building complex next to the White House.

Carter used the extra two hours to leave the White House west wing, where his office is situated, and return to the White House mansion, where the family quarters and formal rooms are located.

Then the President dropped by a briefing for state officials on the Panama Canal treaty. He gave no hint about the climax to the Lance case that was imminent.

Shortly before 5 p.m., the President walked across the private street between the White House and the Old Executive Office Building and took an elevator to the fourth floor. At seven seconds after 5 p.m., he entered the auditorium where his news conferences are held and said:

"I would like to read first a letter that I have just received from Bert Lance..."

Grimly, he answered questions. Within 34 minutes, he was done, without waiting for the traditional closing, "Thank you, Mr. President," that signals the end of a news conference.

He looked at his wrist watch, offered his own "thank you very much," and walked away alone to the Oval Office.

Ash unsympathetic over Lance quitting

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland businessman Roy L. Ash reacted unsympathetically to the news of Bert Lance's resignation from Ash's old job.

Ash, chairman and chief executive officer of Addressograph-Multigraph Corp., was director of the Office of Management and Budget under former President Richard Nixon from 1972 to 1974.

Ash said he did not think Lance's personal finances were more closely scrutinized than those of his predecessors. Ash said he spent half a day under relentless questioning by the joint economic committee of Congress before he became budget chief.

"They asked me just as tough questions as they asked him, and they asked personal questions, too. But fortunately, I had some different answers."

Ash said before he took over the office he sold all the stock he owned and handed over the cash to a trustee. Lance did not sell a large block of stock in the National Bank of Georgia when he took office.

"I had a real blind trust. His was only one-eyed," Ash said.

The former budget director said, however, the nation should not dwell on the resignation and the events surrounding it.

"Let's not have a post mortem on the whole situation. For better or worse, right or wrong, let's go ahead and turn our attention to the man who will succeed Lance," Ash said.

Court House looks for second win

Lions try for some momentum versus unknown Minutemen

By MARK REA
Record-Herald Sports Editor
"Lexington is an unknown quantity. I really don't know what to expect," commented Blue Lion head coach Paul Ondrus. Court House will face the Minutemen on Friday night, looking for their second win in three games.

The Lions are on the upswing after a convincing 28-18 victory last Friday night against a powerful Chillicothe team. Before last week, the Cavaliers had shutout Circleville, 9-0.

Ondrus stated, "They have a lot of people who haven't played much before this year. They do some things good, but I'm hesitant to say that they're a pushover. They are 0-2, but the people they have played are both now 2-0."

"Lexington has given up just two touchdowns in the first game and three last week, so their defense is not what you'd call a sponge and full of holes. They appear to have the capacity to score, even though they've been shutout in their first two games. Last week, they had a few times when they were in scoring position but just couldn't punch it over."

"Our scouts tell us that they have about four outstanding linemen and probably three good players in their offensive backfield. They lost a lot from last season's team and it takes time for these newer players to adjust to the starting positions."

"We've talked to several other people who have seen them to get as many opinions as we could. The consensus seems to be you can have success against their defense, but the teams that beat them were good teams. I don't think they'll be a pushover," Ondrus said.

According to Ondrus, Ben Corey (5-11, 196) at defensive tackle is an outstanding lineman. "Our scouts said he was a super player," the Lion coach said. Also listed above average is James Meggers (6-2, 190) at linebacker and Larry Watts (5-11, 190) at offensive guard and outside linebacker.

Probably the best runner on the squad is Meggers from his fullback position. Ondrus says that he is a hard runner and tough to tackle. Although Meggers is considered the better runner, he is not considered the Minutemen's primary rusher.

The Lexington considers captain Mike Marzetti to be their best ball handler and often times call his number in the huddle. But, according to Ondrus's scouts, he doesn't have outstanding speed and is only listed as having adequate speed. Still, the Minutemen like to give him the ball.

Ondrus reported that Lexington uses mostly traps with their running plays and also enjoy some success with counter plays. They will also try sweeps from an unbalanced line, running in the direction of the power side.

The Minutemen don't throw much, but quarterback Mike Billman (6-1, 176) has a pair of good receivers split ends Al Crawford (5-9, 160) and Jerry Lefever (5-10, 150). Lexington lost eight of their 11 offensive starters with only Billman, Marzetti and returning. It still might take a little time for the other eight to get used to the system.

On defense, the Minutemen will line up like Miami Trace with a '44' defense, a front four and four linebackers. But, that's where the similarity between Trace and Lexington ends.

The Minutemen linebackers play far off the ball and key heavily on one man. They don't play any games with their defense like Trace does such as stacking linebackers and going with a different alignment to confuse the blockers. They just line up and go for one man.

"We shouldn't have any trouble picking up on defense," said Ondrus, "because we've got them out there working every day. If we quit giving up the big play, we'll be fine. You can't settle in and stop them for two downs and then give up a 40-yard run."

"I think possibly it might be a little too much enthusiasm and a breakdown in concentration. This week, we're going to change the linebackers a little. With a little more work, the scores should be a little more lopsided in our favor," the Court House boss continued.

"On offense, we showed we can block bigger players than we are and do it effectively. I think Larry Bricksles has arrived as a top runner and Terry Wilson helped a heckuva lot. We just need a little more consistency," Ondrus concluded.

The Lions are considered healthy with the exception of four or five sophomores who have been ill with a 24-hour virus. Ondrus expects them all to be back and in uniform come Friday night.

The big story is still the availability of Jeff Elliott. Elliott is still a 'wait-and-see' proposition. He will visit a physician one week from today and will hopefully come off the disabled list for next week's contest with Hillsboro.

Johnson concerned with stopping Zorn

CINCINNATI (AP) — Bengals Coach Bill Johnson thinks Seattle quarterback Jim Zorn is a young Fran Tarkenton and is making plans for him. "You have to contain him. He runs around and, if he finds an opening, he drills it," said Johnson, while reviewing his injured list in preparation for Sunday's game with the Seahawks.

The left-handed passer from Cal Poly, like Minnesota's Tarkenton, does not hesitate to run when his receivers are covered. "When Fran scrambles," said Zorn in a telephone conversation, "he scrambles back and forth. He's super. When I scramble, I turn up field more."

The 6-foot-2, 200 pound Zorn, who did not play in 1975, was named National Football League offensive rookie of the year, passing for 2,571 yards and running for 246 more.

Veteran offensive guard John Shinnars suffered a dislocated toe on the second play of the game Sunday in which the Bengals lost 13-3 to the Cleveland Browns and is not expected to play this week.

"If it looked worse than it did today," cringed Johnson, "that poor guy."

"I give him a lot of credit for staying in the ball game."

The nine-year-veteran said that a player fell on his foot while his toe was pointing up. Shinnars said he "sort of shook back in place," and went on.

Receiver Isaac Curtis is bothered by a sore ankle; tight end Bob Trumpy was questionable with a wrenched knee; cornerback Lemar Parrish has sore ribs and Aankie Clark, fullback, has a strained knee.

Rookie fullback Pete Johnson, who missed Sunday's opening game, has returned to workouts.

Correction

It was inadvertently omitted from yesterday's Panthers of the week that David Creamer scored a 35-yard touchdown after a pass from Art Schlichter.

Reds edge Fingers, Padres

Pirates hand Koosman 20th loss

By The Associated Press

Twenty is the magic number for a pitcher but last year's magic has turned into this year's evil spell for Jerry Koosman.

A year ago, Koosman was runner-up to San Diego's Randy Jones for the 1976 National League Cy Young Award with a 21-10 record. But Wednesday night, he lost for the 20th time against only eight victories as the New York Mets were blanked by the Pittsburgh Pirates 4-0, Bruce Kison and Rich Gossage combining on a five-hitter.

"I don't believe I'm a 20-game loser. If I did I would retire," said the 34-year-old lefthander. "I will win 20 games next year, I promise you."

The last time a pitcher won 20 games in a season and then turned around and lost 20 the following year in the National League was in 1973 when Philadelphia's Steve Carlton was 1320 after winning the Cy Young in 1972 with a 27-10 record.

Koosman matched shutout innings with Kison until the sixth when Frank Taveras singled, stole second and third and scored on a single by Fernando Gonzalez. Omar Moreno scored all the way from first on a single by Kison in the seventh and Bill Robinson doubled a run home in the eighth and then scored on a single by Ken Macha.

Elsewhere, the Chicago Cubs downed the Philadelphia Phillies 2-0, the San Francisco Giants nipped the Los Angeles Dodgers 5-4, the Cincinnati

Reds edged the San Diego Padres 3-2, the Atlanta Braves downed the Houston Astros 5-3 and the St. Louis Cardinals trimmed Montreal 8-2 in the nightcap of a two-night doubleheader after the Expos won the opener 4-2.

Reds 3, Padres 2
SAN DIEGO (AP) — Now that the Los Angeles Dodgers have clinched the National League Western Division title, one could understand if it is a little difficult for the Cincinnati Reds to get enthused about the remainder of the season.

According to Reds' slugger George Foster, however, that isn't the case.

"Just because we've been eliminated from the pennant race is no reason not to go out there and continue to play the best we can," he said Wednesday night. "We still want to win every game we can and give the fans their money's worth."

San Diego Padre fans got a little more than they would have preferred Wednesday night as the Reds came from behind to claim a 3-2 victory over the Padres.

Trailing 2-0 after six innings, the Reds pulled to within one run in the seventh on a double by Dave Concepcion and a single by Cesar Geronimo.

Then, as ace reliever Rollie Fingers came on in the eighth to protect the 2-1 San Diego lead for starter Randy Jones, Ken Griffey walked, Joe Morgan tripled to right to tie the game and Johnny Bench lined a two-out single to left to deliver the winning tally.

"I'm sure Rollie didn't mean to hang that slider like he did," said Bench following his 17th game-winning hit of the season and his 102nd RBI.

Right-hander Dale Murray picked up the win in relief by blanking the Padres the final three innings to improve his record to 7-2. Fingers dropped to 8-8.

"Murray hasn't had a good season," said Reds' Manager Sparky Anderson. "But he's pitched very well during the past month."

Morgan and Geronimo collected two hits each for the Reds while rookies Bill Almon and Mike Champion had a pair of safeties apiece for the Padres and George Hendrick belted his 20th home run of the season.

Jones, who has slowly been working his way back into form following off-season arm surgery last winter, announced after the game that Wednesday night's outing would be his final start of the year.

"I've pitched well the last four or five times out," said last year's Cy Young Award winner. "That's what I wanted to accomplish since coming off the disabled list."

"But I've had some stiffness in my shoulder the past 10 days or so and I just don't want to take any chances on injury this late in the season."

Jones retired 14 Reds on grounders Wednesday night while scattering five hits and allowing just one run in seven innings.

Cubs 2, Phillies 0
Ray Burris and Bruce Sutter combined on a seven-hitter as the Cubs slowed the Phillies' pennant push. The Phils' lead in the NL East was sliced to seven games over the Pirates and their magic number remained at four.

Giants 5, Dodgers 4
Rookie Skip James' two-run single capped a three-run seventh-inning rally and notched a club record 20th save as the Giants snapped the Dodgers' 14-game winning streak at San Francisco's Candlestick Park where the NL West Division champions finished with an 8-1 record.

Braves 5, Astros 3
Rowland Office's sixth-inning sacrifice fly broke a tie and Jeff Burroughs drove in an insurance run with a double while Phil Niekro went the distance for the 20th time to pick up his 16th victory.

Expos 4-2, Cardinals 2-8
Lou Brock and Ted Simmons hit two-run homers in the nightcap for St. Louis. The Expos took the opener on run-scoring doubles by Dave Cash and Warren Cromartie (they have 40 doubles apiece) despite the first home run of the season by Dave Rader of the Cardinals.

Biorythms pick OSU, Oakland

By WILL GRIMSLEY

AP Special Correspondent
"Rod Gerald and Ron Springs are both on an upward cycle and Ray Griffin is on a triple-plus," the man said. "That bodes well for Ohio State."

"How about Oklahoma?" someone asked.

Click, click, click went the pocket computer.

"Not so hot," the man replied. "Tom Lott, the team's ace quarterback, is on the low side physically and emotionally and at a very critical stage in the intellectual category. Zac Henderson, the best defensive man, is down in two of three cycles, up only emotionally."

"An analysis of the biorhythms definitely gives Ohio State the edge in Saturday's big football game at Columbus."

It used to be that the old crystal ball was good enough to forecast the outcome of football games. Tea leaves, Chinese fortune cookies and plain old hunches were adequate and, in a crunch, one could fall back on ancient astrology.

No more. Now, with millions of dollars wagered weekly on college and pro games, picking winners in football has become more sophisticated. It is now strictly scientific. NBC has come up with a machine that gobbles up statistics and spits out projections quicker than you can bat an eyelash. Others use intricate and exhaustive form charts.

Campus spies and telephone checkups continue in wide usage but the latest craze is a theory called biorhythms.

This is a brainchild of two 19th Century European scientists who concluded that the physical and emotional states of human beings change rhythmically. Later the intellectual function was included.

Basically, the theory is that everyone has periods of ups and downs (a veritable physical, emotional and intellectual roller coaster) that dictates how a person may act.

It remained for Bernard Gittelson of New York, head of Biorhythm Computers Inc., to computerize the biorhythm charts and popularize the idea in a best-selling book, "Biorhythm - A Personal Science."

Doping football games or other sports events is not Mr. Gittelson's bag. A number of industrial plants subscribe to the charts to promote plant safety. There have been airline pilots who won't fly when the signs are bad and reputable surgeons who won't undertake a serious operation without first consulting the computer.

The birthdate is plotted on a baseline. Physical, emotional and intellectual cycles ascend and descend on different time tables.

"Ken Stabler is on a triple high," he said of the Raiders' quarterback. "That is rare for anybody since the cycles do not normally follow the same timetables."

"On the other hand, the Steelers' two key offensive men, quarterback Terry Bradshaw and running back Franco Harris, come up with negative charts. "Bradshaw shows a low cycle physically and intellectually but high emotionally. Harris also should be down in the first two categories and also up emotionally."

Thus, on the biorhythm charts, it's Ohio State and the Oakland Raiders in the weekend's big games. The next question is: Has anyone checked the plane pilot to see if it's okay to make the trip?

Wait, watch, wonder

Lion co-captain getting tired of the waiting game

By MARK REA
Record-Herald Sports Editor

Wait, watch and wonder.
Jeff Elliott is resigned to those three things, nursing a separated shoulder since the final scrimmage of the year four weeks ago. He waits for next Thursday for another hopeful trip to a Columbus physician. He watches his team practice every night after school and every Friday on the field. And he wonders how things might change if he was playing football his senior year.
"Injuries can change your mind," said Elliott during last night's practice. "I thought there were a lot of things I'd be doing, but now I'm not sure."
The senior co-captain is scheduled to see a doctor one week from today and will hopefully have his arm sling removed. If it is removed, he will suit up the following day for the game against Hillsboro. The main problem after the sling comes off will not be his shoulder. His elbow, which has been bent at a 45-degree angle for four weeks, should be very stiff and tender.
Elliott, despite the injury, still involves himself with practice every day, although contact is out. He constantly works out on the weight machine, keeping his legs in shape. He jogs and runs outside with the team and, although his arm is immobilized against his chest with the special sling, he tries to get in some punting practice.
Elliott plans to play basketball for the Blue Lions and coach Gary Shaffer this fall. When asked why, he replied, "I figured to go out last year and didn't. Then, about halfway through the season, I really wished I had. This year I'm going out because it's my last year."
The basketball season begins approximately one and a half weeks following football and Elliott admits that he might give up football depending upon what the doctors say.
"If the doctors say another two weeks, I won't bother with it," he said. "It doesn't seem worth it just to play for four weeks. If I can't play at least the last five games, I won't play at all."
"Don't get me wrong because I want to play football. But, I just have to ask myself if it's worth it. I would like to get a scholarship somewhere for football or baseball, but I don't think I want to play football if it means waiting another three weeks. I don't think I'll be able to help the team and the other players very much if I just come in for the last four weeks."
Despite his reasons for dropping football in place of basketball and baseball, Elliott drew a strange parallel when asked which sport (baseball or football) he preferred to play. He thought a moment and replied simply, "Football."
He stated that he felt he could be better at football and could get out of the game than baseball. Still he hopes to find a college that can put both talents to work. He stated that the University of Cincinnati as one prospect to his liking.
Elliott perhaps became a bit disillusioned with baseball after last year's Post 25 season, one he would rather forget. "I thought it would be a piece of cake," he said. "I didn't think those guys could hit me. I found out I was wrong, too."
Elliott throws left-handed and it was the left shoulder that is injured. "The doctors tell me that everything will be OK by the time baseball starts," he said. However, he must face facts that date back to the night he injured his shoulder.
According to Blue Lion coach Paul Ondrus, "He's going to have problems bending that elbow. He didn't have it in a proper sling for the first 48 hours and the doctors tell me that the first 48 hours are the most important. But, like they say, it's just a wait-and-see type of thing."

Despite all the extra work, the depressing knowledge of not being able to contribute to the team and the prospects of giving up his final year of prep football altogether, Elliott remains optimistic.
"Sure, I want to get out there," he said, "but there's nothing I can do about it. I just want to psych myself up to play next week against Hillsboro. With Larry (Brickles), Terry (Wilson) and me in the backfield, I don't think we'll have anything to worry about."
With Elliott's return to the lineup, the Lions' worries may be over. But the rest of the SCOL's worries may be just beginning.

Governor Skipper, Crash still favored

Miller can't decide in favorite

DELAWARE, Ohio (AP) — Del Miller, one of harness racing's all-time driving greats, was on the outside looking in at today's Little Brown Jug pacing classic.
So the 64-year-old Pennsylvanian was asked to turn handicapper for the 12 horses chasing the middle jewel of the Triple Crown.

Miller's experience rivals any active driver. He's won all six legs of the pacing and trotting Triple Crowns. He was behind Dudley Hanover in a victorious 1950 Jug trip.
First, he wanted to clear the air before grabbing an entry list in the backstretch of the historic Delaware County Fairgrounds' half-mile track.
"I'm a bad man to talk to," said a grinning Miller. "I own a syndicate interest in Crash. I'm rooting for him." Realistically, he wasn't ready to concede the Jug to Crash, co-favored with Governor Skipper.
"Governor Skipper keeps on winning. That's a big thing. He had two dream trips in The Adios. That makes a difference. I haven't seen him go a rough mile though," said Miller.
Of Crash, he said, "He can leave fast. He will have to. When there are trailers in there, you don't have any choice. If you don't, you're last right away."

Miller spoke of the four horses in the second tier behind the eight-horse first row. They were New Deal, Thorpe Messenger, Barr's Robert D and Jambooger.

Bulletin

DELAWARE, Ohio — A two-inch splinter was removed from the gum of Governor Skipper today, clouding the status of the favorite in the Little Brown Jug.

Red Sox tighten east race

Royals sew up AL West

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

"I'm going fishing and hunting," Kansas City Manager Whitey Herzog said after his Royals clinched at least a tie for the American League West title.
The Royals exploded for six runs in the seventh inning Wednesday night to crush the Minnesota Twins 10-5 and assure themselves of at least a share of the division crown. And Kansas City did it with a remarkable streak of 31 victories in 35 games.
"I would say that's about the best you could do," Herzog said. "You can't expect to do it too often."
Another Kansas City victory or a loss by the Texas Rangers would give the Royals their second straight AL West crown.

While the Royals were reducing their "magic number" to one, the AL East race was getting tighter. The Boston Red Sox edged the Yankees 3-2 and the Baltimore Orioles blanked the Toronto Blue Jays 4-0. That moved Baltimore two games behind the Yankees while the Red Sox are just 2½ games back with 11 days left in the regular season.

Does Herzog have a preference on which East Division club he would like to play?
"No, I'll just get someone mad at me if I say something," the Kansas City manager said.

In other AL games Wednesday, Oakland outlasted Chicago 8-6, Seattle bombarded Milwaukee 11-4 and Texas rolled over California 9-1.

Darrell Porter's 16th home run of the season touched off Kansas City's six-run seventh-inning explosion that buried the Twins.

Orioles 4, Blue Jays 0
"I know one thing for certain," said Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver. "If we win our last 10 games, the Yanks have got to win nine out of 10. That's a large order, so there's still something going on."

The Orioles closed the gap on the Yankees when Lee May's two-run homer backed Ross Grimsley's four-hit pitching as Baltimore blanked Toronto.

Red Sox 3, Yankees 2
"We're still breathing," said Boston Manager Don Zimmer after his Red Sox edged New York. "This is what we wanted three days ago and now we'll take our chances."

The Red Sox completed a two-game series sweep of the Yankees as George Scott's 33rd homer with two out in the sixth inning snapped a 2-2 tie. Lou Piniella homered for New York.

"We're 2½ games out in the standings, but only two behind the Yankees in the loss column," Zimmer said. "We got 11 games to go and I'm hoping to win every one of them."

Rangers 9, Angels 1
Dock Ellis's four-hitter was backed by a home run barrage by Toby Harrah, Jim Sundberg, Willie Horton and Dave May as Texas crushed California.

A's 8, White Sox 6
A two-run homer by Manny Sauganille snapped a 6-6 deadlock and lifted Oakland over Chicago. The loss eliminated the White Sox from the AL West pennant race.

Mariners 11, Brewers 4
Seattle's Ray Fosse had four hits and drove in four runs, pacing the Mariners to an 11-4 victory over the Brewers.

Gregg says New England no pushover

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — It used to be that any National Football League coach who mentioned the New England Patriots in the same breath with the label "no apparent weaknesses" would be laughed back to the semi-pro ranks.

When Cleveland Browns Coach Forrest Gregg said it Wednesday, however, he wasn't chuckling.

The Browns, 13-3 winners over Cincinnati in the NFL opener, will show an apparently improved defense to the Patriots in Monday night's national televised contest in Cleveland.

New England had to come from behind to beat Kansas City 21-17 last Sunday, but Gregg told reporters by telephone that the Browns will be facing "one of the best balanced teams I've ever seen."

"Even without (John) Hannah and (Leon) Gray," Gregg said, "they have no apparent weaknesses. They play practically everyone on the roster and that shows what kind of depth they have."

The absence of all-pros Hannah and Gray, who claim their offensive blocking merits improved contracts, has not diminished New England's running attack, according to the Browns coach.

Cleveland, 9-5 last year against an allegedly soft schedule, is preparing for the Patriots' likely blitzing tactics, which confounded Kansas City, and hoping for a pass rush that stifled Cincinnati.

The Browns recorded five quarterback sacks against the Bengals, compared to only 19 for all of 1976.

Quarry ends retirement

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

As Jerry Quarry goes through the rigid discipline of a boxing comeback in California's secluded, mile-high Lake Arrowhead, he lets his mind drift off into wild fantasies.

He sees big Earnie Shavers catching a faded Muhammad Ali with a thunderclap right hand in their title fight at Madison Square Garden Sept. 29 and the heavyweight division suddenly opening up like a mad Pandora's box.

"Earnie can't ever forget I took him out in the first round back in 1973," the journeyman pugilist said on a visit to New York to choreograph his return to the resin wars. "He's got to give me a shot."

"So I am right back in the picture up there where the money is."

"Boxing's White Hope," said Promoter Don King, who persuaded the Californian to come out of two years' retirement. "Thunder in either fist. Tenacity. A fighter to be reckoned with from the womb to the tomb."

Quarry added a footnote.

"I got enough chin to take anything anybody can throw at it and I can take out anybody I can reach."

Quarry, now 32, is a walking billboard of his reckless willingness to give and take. He has bounced his iron chin off some of the most famous gloves in the business: Muhammad Ali in two fights, Joe Frazier, Ken Norton, Ron Lyle.

His nose is flat. A four-inch gash frames his left eye and there is a smaller piece of stitching that runs like a small river through his bushy eyebrow.

"Smokin' Joe gave me this one; took 11 stitches," he says, almost proudly, as if showing off trophies in his living room. "And this one came from Ali in our first fight."

Quarry, a rugged, bore-in plugger, was chosen to serve as the fatted calf when Ali, out of action 2½ years in a protest against military service, made his celebrated return in Atlanta in October, 1970.

Ali won on a technical knockout in three. In a second fight, in 1972 in Las Vegas, the referee stopped it in the seventh. Both Frazier and Norton stopped Quarry in five in 1975.

"Nobody ever knocked me out. Always the fight was stopped because I got cut. I cut easy, bleed a lot. But I got a jaw like cement."

Quarry has a record of 51 victories, 30 by knockout, eight losses and four draws.

Quarry said disillusionment in his chosen profession began setting in after he watched his brother Mike get demolished by light heavyweight champion Bob Foster in June, 1972.

"It did something to my head," he explained. "It wasn't I got scared. The only fear I have is of dying of suffocation. I never had a fear of pain. I never had a fear of being beaten. For some reason, my confidence suddenly disappeared."

Jerry now is undergoing hypnotherapy which he insists has screwed his head back on his body.

"It's different now," he says. "My mind is together. I got confidence. I'm not going to spend my life changing tires on Greyhound buses. There's big money in boxing. I'm going after it."

"Even Ali said I was the only fighter who fights with soul," the battered journeyman heavyweight said. "Nobody's got more hands than me. Nobody got more feet. I'm going to be boxing's Cinderella Story, like Jim Braddock."

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

Visitors and native New Yorkers in Grand Central Station, the city's main railroad terminal, are seeing a photographic phenomenon when they look at the giant illuminated Kodak Colorama overhead. It is the world's largest color transparency — 60 feet wide by 18 feet deep — and currently features a peaceful scene of an impala deer grazing in a sunlit meadow in Kenya, Africa. It was photographed in 1970 by Ernst Haas, famous color craftsman, and first appeared in his book, "The Creation," that same year.

What isn't apparent to viewers as they admire the tranquil scene on high, is the magnitude of the technical accomplishment involved. They are seeing the largest magnification of a 35mm color slide on public view. For the original of the 60 x 18-foot Colorama is only part of a single 35mm slide, a section measuring 7.16 inches deep by 1.3 inches wide. The achievement — something perhaps for the Guinness Book of Records — is a first-of-its-kind in the 27 years of Colorama history. There have been 424 previous illustrated panoramas hanging high above the main concourse of Grand Central Station where more than a quarter of a million commuters and visitors pass through daily. But they were the results of large-format cameras with large-size negatives. Now a debut has been made for the versatile 35mm format, the camera favored by so many professional and amateur photographers.

To find out how the feat was accomplished, we consulted Walter Latoski, picture editor in Kodak's Photo Illustrations Department, who has been involved in selecting and producing the Colorama transparency for 21 years.

"A dye transfer color print of Haas' deer photo was brought to me one day," Walt recalled, "for use in a graphic arts pamphlet. I took one look at the beautiful image of impala grazing in golden grass and knew it had potential as a Colorama. Not many pictures fit the special ratio of width to depth — 3.3 to 1 — that it must have, but this one did."

When the print was cropped to the correct proportions and after its quality and subject matter had received official approval, Ernst Haas was contacted for permission to borrow the original for tests for the Colorama. The original was a 35mm Kodachrome slide of exceptional sharpness and color quality.

"Haas was thrilled at the prospect but cautious about his irreplaceable original," Walt said. "I flew to New York and personally brought the slide to Rochester. Our lab copied and enlarged the original on an internegative and the original was hand carried back to Haas' studio. Our testing would be done from the internegative image area, now measuring 2 1/2 by 9 1/2 inches."

Three test panels, each 4 feet wide by 18 feet deep, were made. The total magnification from the original image was greater than anything ever handled before — a matter of 516 times larger, someone figured. However, by using the internegative, an 80-times magnification was needed. It was done with the special Colorama enlarger, built to handle an 8 x 20-inch negative for a normal 44-times enlargement.

"The enlarger was focused on the film easel 58 feet away for the required magnification," Walt reported. "The test panels were processed and hung on a special preview illuminator, 8 feet wide and 18 feet deep. It is identical to the Grand Central illuminator in every way except total size. We backed away from 40 to 70 feet to view the test results, which is how the people in the terminal would seek the image. It passed with flying colors — and we got the official 'Go ahead!'"

The actual production of the "Deer" Colorama started in late January. The 60-foot width was divided into 20 equal panels, each 3 feet wide and 18 feet deep. Skilled technicians printed each 3-foot section on Ektacolor print film. To minimize color shifts, all exposing and processing were completed on the same day. The "Deer" transparency took five hours of exposing and nine hours of processing.

It took one day to check the 20 panels on illuminated tables for image registration, spotting and butt-splicing. The next day, the panels were put together with gel cement and three-inch-wide clear acetate strips, after which they were left to cure for 48 hours. The curing strengthens the splicing and enables them to withstand the extreme stretching they are subjected to during display.

Finally came the attachment of grommets for hanging before the complete visual preview in Rochester. The transparency was suspended, backlit and inspected in 8-foot-wide sections on the duplicate illuminator. With everything satisfactory, the "Deer" Colorama was wound on an 18-foot spool, wrapped in tissue paper and waterproof canvas, placed in a special container and shipped by truck to New York City on Feb. 15. One week later, on Washington's birthday, it was installed in Grand Central Station with an elaborate, mechanized hoist and track system, to remain on public view through March 28.

It takes a large stretch of imagination to realize that part of a single 35mm slide could be magnified on such a grand scale and raised to such heights to bring so much beauty to so many people. But that is the unique beauty of photography.

With spring and the time for buying seeds for your garden approaching, it seems a good time to explain what F1 hybrids are. Many of the seed packages will bear this notation.

We have an expert to help. John A. Wott, Purdue University extension home environment horticulturist says: "An F1 hybrid is produced by crossing two different but specially selected true-breeding inbred parental lines or strains. This combines some of the best characteristics of each."

How is this done? The hybridizer dusts pollen from the male parent onto the female parts of the flowers of the seed-parent line. This takes a lot of time, since the delicate operation usually is done by hand. The resulting seed you buy is an F1 hybrid variety.

"Not always superior," says Wott, "they do however generally mature earlier, produce more flowers, show greater vigor, display better uniformity and plant form, and out-perform cheaper inbred varieties." They generally cost more than the ordinary inbred or cross-pollinated kinds, but they are worth it, Wott says, since they usually give better results.

You can't get all garden annuals in F1 hybrid varieties but the list is expanding. They are readily available for petunia, snapdragon, geranium, zinnia, marigold, pansy, sultana, ageratum and fibrous begonia, among others.

Buy new seeds each year if using hybrids, Wott advises, since seeds saved from F1 hybrid plants for use the next spring don't do very well generally. They often fail to give the same flower color, plant vigor or uniformity as the parent plants.

Here are some of the newer F1 hybrids in vegetable seed catalogues: Early Xtra Sweet sweet corn, Better Boy and Small Fry tomatoes, Patty Pan summer squash, Snow Crown and Snow King cauliflower, Premium Crop and Green Comet broccoli, Stonehead and Harvest Queen cabbage and Slicemaster cucumber.

Among flowers are: Magic Charms and Queen of Hearts dianthus; Showboat, Climax and Gold Coin marigolds; Little Darling mix, Bright Butterflies and Floral Carpet series of snapdragons; and Peter Pan series, Carved Ivory, Scarlet Ruffles and Pink Ruffles zinnia.

Rhubarb

While rhubarb leaves are poisonous, the stalks may be eaten all summer. Many of those who raise rhubarb do not harvest all summer because this year's growth is needed to build up the plant crowns for next year.

If your rhubarb does not turn red it probably is for one of two reasons. Some kinds do not have red stems. And red-stemmed types will stay green if the plant is grown in the shade.

New Garden Books
"New Ideas in Flower Gardening," by Derek Fell (Countryside Books, Barrington, Ill.).

Fell crams a lot of material into fewer than 100 pages of garden information and fine photographs. His aim is to give planting ideas and advice to make flower gardening easier and more rewarding. He covers annuals, perennials, bulbs, water and shade-growing plants, container, rock and wild-flower gardens.

"When the Good Cook Gardens," written by the staff of Ortho Books (San Francisco, Calif.). There is a wealth of information here, including how to grow or buy vegetables; recipes of good cooks all over the world; oriental vegetables; the wok, illustrating some new concepts in vegetable cooking; the art of vegetable cutting; all about herbs; and a vegetable planting chart. The book also advises about seed sources.

FOR MEDICINAL PURPOSES ONLY
WASHINGTON (AP) — Beer, according to an Assyrian tablet of 2,000 B.C., was one of the foods that sustained passengers on the biblical Noah's legendary Ark.

The United States Brewers Association says the tablet is the first recorded mention of the brew, which has been credited with healing powers throughout history.

Saxons, according to the association, used beer, warmed and blended with medicinal roots, to cure hiccups. Syrians used beer to induce relaxation and Arabs used it in bread as a leavening agent. Today, the drink is part of a multitude of recipes of all kinds.

BULGARIAN POPULATION RISES
SOFIA, Bulgaria (AP) — Bulgaria's population grew from 3.7 million persons in 1900 to 8.7 million in 1975, the news agency BTA reported. Nearly 60 percent of the population resides in urban districts.

Two parked cars damaged

Tire blowout blamed in traffic accident

A tire blowout caused a towed trailer to crash into two parked cars along the 100 block of E. Court Street Wednesday, according to a Washington C.H. Police Department report.

Charles E. Hays, 32, 90 Hickory Lane, who was towing the trailer with his pickup truck, reported to police officers the trailer's tire blew out causing the vehicle to swerve right and sideswipe a parked car. Hays stated he didn't know the 11:53 a.m. accident had occurred and kept driving.

According to the report, he drove a half block and while turning right the trailer failed to track his truck and clipped another parked car. Investigating officers reported the trailer's axle was bent and appeared to have been bent before the blowout occurred. The wheel was out of alignment, according to their report, and may have caused the flat tire.

The parked vehicles, which both sustained slight damage, belonged to Richard D. Houseman of Sabina and Teresa J. (Watson) Estle, 344 Ely St.

Two vehicles collided in Frisch's Restaurant parking lot, 543 Clinton Ave., Wednesday afternoon, police officers reported.

Marjorie P. Forsythe, 37, 541 High St., was attempting to back into a parking space and Robert H. Kline, 51, London, was backing out of a parking space around 3:13 p.m. The vehicles collided causing minor damage to both. Neither driver was injured.

Police officers cited a local woman after she apparently lost control of her car on the Clark Oil service station lot, 330 W. Court St., and hit a block retaining wall early Wednesday.

According to a police department report, Linda L. Brown, 25, 702 McArthur Way, turned into the station and stopped her car by changing the shift selector lever. The car reportedly then traveled backward into a flower garden and retaining wall around 6:33 Wednesday morning.

The woman stated to police she felt the accelerator pedal had stuck. The investigating officers reported they found a 5-foot acceleration mark at the point the car reversed motion. She was cited for reckless operation on private property. Her car received only minor damage.

In one other accident Wednesday, Helen J. Seipelt, 405 East St., reported to police officers her car was struck by an unknown vehicle sometime Tuesday night or Wednesday morning.

She reportedly parked her car in front of her home about 5 p.m. Tuesday. When she checked the vehicle around noon Wednesday she discovered minor damage to the front end. Police officers said they found traces of red paint on her car, allegedly left by the other vehicle.

Traffic Court

A local resident was found guilty of four traffic offenses in Washington C.H. Municipal Court Tuesday afternoon.

Stemming from a July 30 arrest, James M. Zugg, 24, of 3472 U.S. 22, had been charged with failure to display proper registration, reckless operation and driving while under suspension. In addition, Zugg was charged with another count of reckless operation on a private warrant.

Zugg had spun his tires on the Clark Oil service station lot, 330 W. Court St., nearly colliding with a gasoline pump island and another vehicle on July 30.

Municipal Court Judge John P. Case found Zugg guilty on all charges. He sentenced the man to two days in the city jail and $100 fine, plus costs, on the driving under suspension violation. He was also fined $50 and costs each for the reckless operation and failure to display charges.

Zugg was issued a $25-fine and costs on the private complaint for reckless operation.

On Wednesday, the Municipal Court received a few signed waivers for speeding citations issued by Ohio Highway Patrol officers. Those paying fines and court costs were: Mark S. Johnson, 21, of 8020 U.S. 62-N, $35; Donald E. Hunter, 48, Kettering, $30; Weldon B. Fannin, 50, of Waynesville, $30; and Terry L. Farmer, 21, Jeffersonville, $30.

Nun expelled from Rhodesia

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Sister Janice McLaughlin, an American Roman Catholic nun arrested for violating security laws, was ordered expelled from Rhodesia today.

Two detectives escorted Sister Janice from her cell at Chikarubi Detention Center shortly after dawn, allowed her to collect belongings from her Salisbury apartment and drove her to the airport for a flight to the United States via Johannesburg and Rio de Janeiro.

Wearing a light cotton skirt and blouse, she packed a crucifix, a large map of Rhodesia, a bag of books, clothing and a tube of toothpaste. She told detectives she was leaving behind — "for others to read" — a dictionary of the local African Shona language, James Joyce's "Ulysses" and novels by the liberal writer Doris Lessing, who used to live in Rhodesia.

The 35-year-old Maryknoll nun from Pittsburgh, Pa., was arrested Aug. 31 along with three other members of a Roman Catholic Commission for Peace and Justice. The quartet had prepared a report accusing Rhodesian authorities of inflicting hardship on 580,000 blacks by moving them to "protected villages" away from black guerrillas fighting the white government.

A regional magistrate, calling Sister Janice a supporter of the "terrorist cause," ordered her held without bail at a hearing last Friday. In court she admitted her sympathy for the insurgents.

She was to stand trial next Tuesday under a security law that prohibited the spreading of alarm, fear or despondency, and could have been sentenced to as much as seven years in prison if convicted.

Showers expected to develop across northern Ohio today may spread over the remainder of the state tonight and Friday as low pressure approaches from the west.

However, no large temperature changes are likely with daytime highs from the upper 60s to low 70s and lows at night in the 50s.

Cloudiness broke up over much of Ohio Wednesday night. Temperatures at daybreak ranged from the mid 50s in cloudy sections to the upper 40s in some of the areas where skies cleared.

An area of weak high pressure covered the eastern states including Ohio this morning. Low pressure over the northern plains is drifting east.

SATURDAY THROUGH MONDAY

Fair Saturday with a chance of showers Sunday and clearing Monday. Highs mid to upper 70s Saturday dropping to the upper 60s and low 70s by Monday. Lows in the 60s early Saturday lowering to the 50s by Monday morning.

Former county resident named to position with Farm Bureau

John Wood, formerly of Fayette County, has been named Ohio Farm Bureau Federation (OFBF) organization director for Delaware and Franklin counties, according to Glenn Pirtle, Ohio Farm Bureau Federation vice president of field services.

Wood succeeded Jody Polen. Wood has been with the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation since 1975 serving as organization director in Allen, Van Wert and Mercer counties. In 1976, he was reassigned Hancock, Marion and Wyandot counties where he had been working until his new assignment was made.

As organization director, he will coordinate local Farm Bureau activities in the counties and serve as a liaison between the counties and the state organization.

Wood was raised on a swine production and grain farm in Fayette County. He graduated from Miami Trace High School in 1968 and earned an education degree from Ohio State University in 1973.

Wood, 27, earned a state farmer degree from the Future Farmers of America. He and his wife, Patty, reside at 1970 McCoy Road, Columbus. He has four step-children.
